What Are Hitler's Plans? Ours Should Be Simple What Explosives Do An Easy Sum

San Francisco, March 18—Here, as on the eastern side of the continent, and north and south, Americans ask:

What does Hitler MEAN? What will Europe DO?

On one point all agree: Whatever Europe and Hitler may do, they must do it with no help in man-power or financial power, from this country.

No official would commit political suicide by dragging or pushing this country into war, and if any official were so foolish, he would soon hear from the people: Thanks, but we do not care to go.

France and England, worried, reap the reward of their selfish foolishness, expressed in the Treaty of Versailles. Hitler tears up that treaty, and France and England look on, only praying that nothing worse may come.

Hitler's job, as dictator, is unlike Mussolini's. The latter shares, as Italian ruler, in the Allies' victory. His people are content to have him sit and rule. Hitler finds on his hands the hard job of wiping out the disgrace of defeat, and, according to Russian opinion, he is driven to action by increasing economic difficulties, as well as by the natural craving for revenge.

Nations usually wait longer for revenge. France waited more than 40 years, from the War of 1870 to the big war, before taking back Alsace-Lorraine. Hitler, apparently, if he really means war, feels that he cannot afford to wait.

What he really wants, he alone knows. The change from an Austrian house-painter to dictator of a great nation is a difficult change. After what has happened, anything may seem possible to him.

Whatever is to come is the affair of Europe. This nation might well say to others:

"The United States looks upon this earth as an aggregation of continents. We feel responsible for this continent, as regards any conquests in South America, forbidden by the Monroe Doctrine, or any aggression in North America.

"We have, and propose to keep, the friendship of Canada and Mexico. We shall look after this continent. Let Europe and Asia attend to theirs."

Already Europe suggests that of course this nation must play its part, if war comes. It must, and will play its part, by staying at home, keeping out intruders and attending to its own business.

France and England look to Russia to play an important, anti-German part, if there is to be war. Fascist Germany despises Bolshevik Russia and Hitler has said so officially. Stalin does not like being despised. He does business with England, has a close treaty with France, as in the Czarist days. France wisely overlooking Russia's unpaid debt of six billion dollars. Russia has a great air fleet, nearly a million trained young fighters, with ten or twenty millions more if needed. Today's Russia is not the Russia of feeble Czars, "Mad Rasputins," gambling grand dukes. Today's Russia has power.

This new air war, that will see tens of thousands of planes in the air, enough to wipe out every city, town and village in Europe, will be a new war.

One nation, striking first and swiftly, through the air, destroying cities, poisoning whole populations, might frighten others into submission, as one hold-up man, with his pistol pointed, frightens a room full of men taken by surprise.

What will happen no one knows, especially to this country, if war should turn our way. A child in its crib is not more completely unprepared and undefended against kidnaping than is this country against war.

Consider for a moment one of the great steel towers, 700 feet high, that will support steel cables, holding up the giant bridge soon to be thrown across the Golden Gate, the gate that leads from the great bay of San Francisco and Oakland, out into the Pacific ocean.

Through that gate, the water, in a narrow passage 600 feet deep, rushes with terrific speed and power.

To establish the wide footings for the bridge, repeated small charges of high explosive are used to make a small hole in the rock, below the water, a hole, the engineer tells you "about as big as a chair."

In that hole a "big 200-pound bomb" of TNT is exploded. That 200-pound bomb blows a hole in the solid rock about 20 feet wide and high and 40 feet long.

DEVER CHARGES $500,000 GONE

Between $500,000 and $750,000 has vanished from the funds of Dill & Company, Inc., Boston brokers, Attorney-General Paul A. Dever asserted today.

He ordered an immediate investigation by his department of affairs of this company and an affiliate, Investors Trading Corporation, both with State street headquarters.

At the same time he asked state and city police to locate for "an interview," Harold L. McCormack, president of Dill & Company.

His home is on Main street, Waltham. Dever said he had tried unsuccessfully to find him.

The attorney-general said he had received numerous complaints, especially from elderly persons and clergymen, of alleged irregularities in the handling of accounts of the company.

License Revoked

Recently the securities division of the State Department of Public Utilities revoked the brokerage license of Dill & Company on grounds of alleged fraudulent operations.

An involuntary petition in bankruptcy was filed against Dill & Co. and a receiver was appointed a week ago.

Fraudulent use of the mails was alleged by the federal securities and exchange commission and federal court temporarily enjoined the company and its officers from doing business.

The securities commission alleged that Dill & Company and Investors Trading were in effect one and the same organization.

Named in the commission's bill in equity were McCormack; Frank J. Dill, of Arlington, president and treasurer of Investors Trading; Edward J. Blanchfield, of Cambridge, officer of the latter; Shirley H. Eldridge, Waltham, treasurer of Dill & Company, and Miss Ethel C. Lomasney, of Somerville, clerk of the latter.

BOY GASHED In Fall Off Bike

Albert slipped against the cellar window while riding his bicycle and fell through with a crash. His mother found him with blood pouring from a cut in his foot.

Fearing he would bleed to death, she called police. Neighbors applied a tourniquet, put him into an automobile and raced him to City Hospital.

Disinfection for the Parasites

A CONTRIBUTOR to the Boston Evening American speaks of the impractical ideology inspiring the policy of destructive taxation.

That is a very polite way of putting it, but we might as well speak politely of the playful and impulsive acquisitiveness of the gentleman who thumps us on the head and rifles our pockets at some dark street corner.

As a matter of vivid fact, there is nothing idealistic about the tax racket.

There is nothing impractical about it.

It is a graft, pure and simple, and it supports more worthless people than all the other forms of racketeering and robbery in the country.

The politicians live upon this tax graft. The families of the politicians live upon it even to the most distant relatives.

The friends of the politicians live upon it. The families of the friends of the politicians live upon it.

The supporters of the politicians live upon it and the families of the supporters of the politicians and the friends of the families of the supporters of the politicians and their friends and their families live upon it.

THE big fleas which have little fleas upon their backs to bite 'em, and the little fleas with lesser fleas and so ad infinitum are nothing compared to the political parasites, and THEIR political parasites and all the parasites of the PARASITES clustered on the backs of the taxpayers to bite them and bleed them and live off them idly, luxuriously,—gleefully and uselessly.

As the taxes increase, the swarms of political parasites increase and fatten and propagate.

Approximately five thousand million dollars in salaries to politicians are paid out every year by the taxpayers of this country; and this enormous amount is increasing every year.

Over three million, two hundred and fifty thousand politicians and their families and friends are

JAIL Threat Speeds MAGRATH

Threat of arrest and being held all night sent Medical Examiner George Burgess Magrath hurrying to Chelsea court today.

The arrest threat was delivered from the bench by Judge Samuel R. Cutler after the medical examiner had failed to appear as a witness.

"Tell him that if he doesn't appear, a capias will be issued for his arrest, said Judge Cutler, "and he will stay here all night so that he can testify tomorrow morning."

'ELY Plot' Hit in PROBE

PLAN TO BEAT CURLEY SEEN

Representative Roland D. Sawyer, Democrat, of Ware, charged today before the House Rules committee that ex-Governor Ely and Republican leaders plotted to use the Boston Finance Commission to try to defeat Governor Curley at the polls and to prevent his organizing the state under the Democratic Party.

Chairman E. Mark Sullivan of the Boston Finance Commission, accused today by Attorney George R. Farnum of hampering Farnum's investigations, was denied the privilege of cross-examining his accuser.

Farnum was again a witness before the House rules committee on a resolve of Representative Christian A. Herter, Republican, of Boston, for a legislative inquiry on land-takings while Edmund L. Dolan was city treasurer and treasurer of the White Fund.

"A pronounced change was noticed after Mr. Sullivan came into the Finance Commission," testified Farnum.

"Though I was attempting to do in a humble way a tremendous amount of work in a short period of time, I was bothered by Mr. Sullivan."

Saltonstall Halts

Chairman Sullivan, who a few weeks ago supplanted Judge Jacob Kaplan as finance commission chairman, leaped to his feet. The audience, filling Gardner auditorium, leaned forward.

"By what act——" began Sullivan.

"We will have no questions from the floor," shouted Speaker

Berlin, March 19—A squadron of German bombers and pursuit planes roared over Berlin today in the first military air maneuvers since the World War.

Germany, exulting in Reichsfuehrer Hitler's announcement that Germany was rearmed, feverishly celebrated this mass demonstration of fitness to fight.

Even as the planes flew overhead, rumors flew through Berlin that the United States would protest against the violation of the German-American peace treaty and that Germany had concluded a military alliance with Japan.

At the same time German officials said that, now that the arms limitation imposed by the treaty of Versailles had been disregarded, the demilitarized Rhineland zones provisions of the treaty would be the next to be eliminated—unless France accepts the demilitarization of similar areas on French soil.

Germany was forbidden, under the Versailles treaty, "to maintain or construct any fortifications either on the left bank of the Rhine or on the right bank to the west of a line drawn 50 kilometers to the east of the Rhine."

Before the Saar Basin territory was returned to Germany, Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler agreed that the whole of the Saar was to be considered the left bank of the Rhine and as such was to be demilitarized.

Germany's fighting planes appeared suddenly over the capital this afternoon. They flew low. The roar of their motors filled the streets with thunder.

For almost an hour they crossed and criss-crossed the city.

The entire population of Berlin rushed out of houses and offices. The people stood in the streets and hung out of windows, shouting and waving.

The city's normal life was halted as the people watched Air Minister Hermann Wilhelm Goering's practical proof that Germany is no longer bound by the Versailles treaty.

From 100 to 150 planes were estimated to have participated.

The squadron flew in various formations. One numbered 33 planes. Others went in formations of threes and sixes.

The afternoon's maneuver, however, was merely a preliminary to tonight's air defense program and was staged to remind the citizens of Berlin that they must put out their lights and remain quiet in a rehearsal of mimic warfare between 10 p. m. and midnight.

"Richthofen Day"

The principal flight participating in the maneuver was called the "Von Richthofen," in memory of the "Red Knight" of Germany who fought with General Goering—himself an ace—above the trenches in France. Goering himself became leader of the old Von Richthofen flight when the "Red Knight" was killed.

This probably will become Squadron No. 1 of Germany's new air fleet.

The Foreign Office today busily cataloguing the world's reaction to the death knell of the Versailles Treaty, sounded by Reichsfuehrer Hitler's announcement of a conscript German army, vigorously denied the Germano-Japanese alliance rumors.

Germany is ready, official sources said, to discuss the entire problem of European stability with Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, regardless of Great Britain's protest against Reichsfuehrer's rearmament declaration.

The British note was officially described as a mere "objection, rather than a protest, which was made as a demonstration before world opinion."

Ready for Parley

"We are ready to talk disarmament," an official spokesman said, adding that the British emissaries now would have to negotiate on an equal basis with Germany as a full-fledged military power.

"This is the only point changed in the forthcoming negotiations," he said, "but it is a most essential one as far as Germany is concerned. Otherwise, the basis of the talks settled before we reinstituted military training remains the same."

Already the prospects for wrenching the Reich loose from the remaining limitations of the Versailles treaty were being discussed in many quarters.

The construction of a navy, which combined with the newly-created air force, would represent a double threat to Great Britain, was said by officials to be a "secondary matter."

Nevertheless, the government spokesman said, the Reichswehr has the naval problem under study.

At no time in his career has Hitler apparently been so popular throughout Germany as since he undertook last Saturday to hew out his policy independent of the desires of the rest of the world.

Regarding rumors of a German-Japanese alliance it was pointed out that the Moscow radio station announced yesterday General Sadao Araki, former war minister of Japan, was on his way to Berlin to conclude an alliance.

A high Berlin official admitted today that the idea of a military pact with Japan had been floated about a year ago, but this, he said, was spiked by the Reichswehr.

The unofficial report of a possible American protest said Ambassador William E. Dodd was expected to present it within a few days, but that it would be less vigorous than the representation made yesterday by Great Britain.

Washington Policy Is "Watchful Waiting"

Washington, March 19—Watching the European situation developing from Germany's rearmament, President Roosevelt and his advisers on foreign affairs were expected to hold another conference today to chart the American course.

The President talked late yesterday with Secretary Hull and Norman H. Davis, his ambassador-at-large and disarmament expert. These discussions, based on the latest reports from American envoys in Europe, are expected to go on.

Great Britain, after sending a protest to Berlin against Reichsfuehrer Hitler's defiance of the military clauses of the Versailles treaty, let it be known she was considering requesting the American government's views.

Early today the State Department had not yet received any communication from London.

War Odds

London, March 19—Lloyds dramatically "cut" its odds against war, fearing that Chancellor Hitler's denunciation of the Versailles Treaty's military clauses has made war more imminent.

The famous insurance brokers quoted 10 to one against the outbreak within a year of a war involving Britain and seven to one against a war involving France and Germany.

Three months ago the prices on the respective bets were 25 to one and 10 to one.

War Briefs

Berlin, March 19—Details of the new German conscription plan will be announced by Minister of Defense Werner Von Blomberg "within 12 hours," it was stated officially today.

Vienna, March 19—Demand for restoration of conscription in Austria was made today in a signed statement by Emil Fey, minister of the interior.

Bucharest, March 19—The fever of military preparedness spread to the Balkans today when the Rumanian cabinet approved a special appropriation of $20,000,000 for armaments.

Cleveland, March 19—Newton D. Baker, advocate of American association with the League of Nations, expressed belief that United States should offer aid to settle European political disturbance arising from Germany's rearmament.

Paris, March 19—Chamber of Deputies finance committee approves appropriation of 20,000,000 francs as bonuses for re-enlistment in French army.

HITLER REVERSES SCRIPTURE AS GERMANY "PREPARES"

The order is "Stack shovels!" now. Germany drops the mask and these farmer troops, given military training with spades instead of rifles, find themselves an efficient cog in a fighting machine which Dictator Hitler boasts openly to be on a par with any army in Europe. "They shall beat their swords into plowshares . . . neither shall they learn war any more," said the Old Testament. your little boy, or your little congressman?

If one 200-pound bomb can blow a hole 20 by 40 feet in solid rock, what do you think a FIVE THOUSAND POUND TNT BOMB would do, dropped in the heart of San Francisco, or at the corner of Broad and Wall streets in New York city, or close to the left ear of the bronze Indian that stands on the Capitol dome, over-looking Washington, D. C.?

What would 100 such bombs do, scattered over the crowded districts of a city? They would crush and topple the tallest buildings, send crowds rushing into the streets, there to breathe in deadly poison gases that would follow the first bombardment.

Poison gas could easily kill one million human beings in New York within an hour. You would not like to be responsible for this country's unprepared condition, if that should happen.

WAR CLOUD LOOMS AS IT DID IN '14

By Associated Press

The seeds of Hitler's sensational military gesture germinated in the ashes of the World War, a catastrophe which burst on a horrified civilization out of circumstances similar in some respects to those existent in Europe today.

Causes of the world war were diffuse and obscure, but many historians agree on three powerful factors:

1—The clash of national interests and ideals.

3—Economic rivalry among the nations of Europe.

The actual, direct cause was the assassination of the Archduke Francis Ferdinand of Austria-Hungary in Sarajevo, Bosnia, followed by an ultimatum served upon Serbia by Austria-Hungary.

And today, as in 1914, the powers of Europe have been discussing a system of alliances as a possible device for maintaining peace on the Continent, even as the old balance of power was relied upon in pre-war days.

France and Great Britain have sponsored a proposal for setting up a joint defensive air alliance in western Europe and a new "Locarno" pact designed to preserve tranquility in eastern Europe.

Hitler, in announcing Germany's rearmament plans Saturday, said an invitation to join a defensive alliance presupposes mutual strength, which he indicated Germany proposed to acquire.

Germany has considered the Versailles treaty an unjust millstone around her neck.

In recognition of the Reich's long-standing complaint, the Franco-British security proposals provided for her release from some, but not all, of the treaty's military clauses.

In return for this concession, Germany was expected to agree to return to the League of Nations, participate in the eastern Locarno proposal and subscribe to a general European armament limitation convention.

Britain and Italy Invited To Conference in Paris

By Associated Press

London, March 19—France today suggested an emergency conference of representatives of Great Britain, France and Italy concerning the German rearmament situation and Italy agreed, it was learned authoritatively.

France asked for the conference before next Sunday when Sir John Simon, British foreign minister, is scheduled to go to Berlin.

British officials expressed the belief that all differences would be ironed out before the time for the conference with Reichsfuehrer Hitler.

French disapproval of the British note to Germany as "weak" was indicated by French quarters today as Ambassador Andre Charles Corbinof France interviewed Sir John Simon.

At the same time authoritative quarters said that whether Great Britain will ask the United States to take steps in connection with Germany's newly-announced military power might depend on conversations between Sir John and Reichsfuehrer Hitler of Germany in Berlin.

French quarters here expressed indignation over what they termed a lack of details of the Anglo-French communique of last month in the British note delivered to Berlin yesterday. They said they particularly resented British avoidance of reference to the League of Nations.

The French said they thought the note did not bear down on Germany sufficiently.

Rumors circulated in diplomatic circles that Germany will shortly announce her return to the league, but government officials said they had not received any hint of this kind from Germany and they did not expect any action on the subject at least until after Hitler had discussed the whole situation with Sir John Simon.

Sir John, accompanied by Captain Anthony Eden, lord priv seal, will go to Berlin Sunday and talk with the German leader next Monday and Tuesday in an effort to get him to include Germany in the British government's plan for a general European peace system.

BRITAIN Has New Plan ON AIR RAIDS

By International News Service

London, March 19—The British government is studying measures to combat air raids by means other than counter-bombing, Prime Minister MacDonald told the House of Commons today in debate on a new $100,000,000 air budget, largest since the world war.

The estimates called for about $100,029,750 or $16,625,000 higher than that of last year.

Sir Philip Sassoon, under secretary for air declared British air force is fifth among those of the world, although this country has more qualified pilots on the active list than the United States or Italy.

Sir Philip referred repeatedly to American aviation, both civil and military.

He said the American method of grouping all military aircraft instead of dividing it into first-line forces and reserves furnished an incorrect basis for comparison with British increases.

Sir Philip said the royal air force building program would bring its total strength to 1170 machines by the end of 1935 and to 1310 planes by the end of 1936.

Over ninety thousand new names were added to the federal payrolls alone last year, and there were proportionate increases in all the one hundred and seventy-five thousand town governments, township governments, city governments, district governments, county governments, and state governments of this afflicted nation.

All the unnecessary governments and all the superfluous politicians are demanding and imposing more and more taxes on industry, more and more taxes on property, more and more taxes on productive pursuits, and more and more taxes on the public generally.

THE main business, and apparently the only business of most of these politicians is to devise plans to plunder the people and to secure more money to keep more parasites on the public payrolls, until now over thirteen thousand million dollars a year, nearly one third of the whole national income, goes toward defraying the constantly mounting costs of inefficient government and constantly increasing numbers of useless and worthless politicians.

Moreover, these increases in expense, these increases in parasitic growths upon the body politic, these increases in unbearable tax burdens, will continue until the victim, who is the taxpayer, sickens and dies, or until he acquires sense enough and strength enough to rid himself of the political vermin which infest him.

All the patient needs is a good disinfecting; and the patient himself must do that job.

You cannot expect the parasites to employ the disinfectant on themselves.

A LEECH will drink until it is full and then fall off, but a politician is never full. He never lets go. He is a parasite until he dies or until the victim dies.

For the good of the country, he must teach the voters that the politicians are living upon THEM,—that the politicians are eating the substance which should make for prosperity, that they are costing the country millions of dollars a year which should go into wealth producing and labor creating industry, that all the energies of the nation nowadays are going to the support of useless, unconstructive, uncreative politicians, that the politicians not only do no good, but do a lot of actual harm.

They are for the most part ignorant and incompetent.

They have been for the most part failures in the varieties of activities which they have previously pursued, and if they had to go back to work, would be failures again.

Still, the politicians feel that they must do something to justify their existence and their position on the public payroll, so they meddle and muddle and hamper and inujre and interfere and put burdens on business and drop monkey wrenches in the machinery of industry and plunder and blunder and prevent progress and prolong the depression and keep production from increasing and unemployment from decreasing.

ALL the time the politicians are assuring the people that they are doing all this damage in the public interest, when they are not even thinking of the public interest, when they are thinking of nothing but the interests of the politicians and the re-election of the politicians to office and the retention of the families of the politicians and the friends of the politicians and the supporters of the politicians on the public payrolls.

The politician is always thinking of HIMSELF.

The politician taxes everybody but HIMSELF.

Even his mail is free.

And his Congressional speeches,—those windy, wordy speeches, most of which are not even delivered, are distributed free all over the United States, at a cost to the TAXPAYERS, to the useful, productive element of the community of over seven thousand dollars A DAY.

He rides free, and he rides on the bowed back of the burdened taxpayer.

WHAT are the taxpayers going to do about it?

He has, by popular referendum, created a law which abolishes one house of the state legislature.

Many more eliminations of useless politicians and reductions in the cost of government can be accomplished in the same way.

The public is ready for the reform.

In states where there is no referendum there is another means available.

The taxpayers can organize closely and simply refuse to pay taxes to be dissipated in riotous extravagance.

The public will soon find that the ancient Confucian motto, "No tickee, no shirtee," still prevails.

The public will find that where there is no plunder there are no parasites.

At least three million of the three and a quarter million parasites on the public payroll will lose their enthusiasm for public service if their part of the five thousand million dollar pay check is not regularly forthcoming.

Gentlemen of the taxpayers protective organization, it is time for action.

What the country needs is the elimination of all politicians except a few honest and competent ones.

And if we have only the honest and competent, they will be few enough, God knows, and God be praised.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

Emil Ludwig Says

War or Doom of Hitler

By EMIL LUDWIG
Special by Wireless to Boston Evening American

Locarno, March 19—The new German military law augurs either war or the downfall of Hitler. With a promptitude typical of the surprise moves which the "Fuehrer" considers the art of governing, he replied aggressively to the security measures taken by the French government.

Emil Ludwig

The rupture of the Treaty of Versailles is thus complete, and only one who sees salvation in enlightenment can congratulate himself over this new surprise move.

The official introduction of obligatory military service, which in reality has existed in effect for a long time but under other names, will have three consequences: One for Germany, one for England and one for the rest of Europe.

The Germans prefer obedience to liberty; they congratulate themselves loudly on the fact that they are again permitted parades and exercises. What caused their unhappiness in recent times was at bottom only the prohibition against carrying arms.

Military service, which in Germany was always considered a citizen's right, will now replace the supressed right to vote.

English Prejudices Changing

The official program of the third Reich, expounded by Hitler in his work entitled "Mein Kampf"—a book which was circulated in millions of copies and exalted in hundreds of judicial commentaries by historians and philosophers—this program of union by force of all the Germanic branches existing in Central Europe, can only be realized by war. It is in vain that for two years they have attempted to find in Communism the pretext for this rearmament.

It is to be hoped that this thunderbolt will react upon England in the same manner as a storm which clears up the sky. Even last week, when I was in London, I could sense the changing of old English prejudices. For five years an armed France has been considered equally as dangerous as an armed Germany by the people of England.

As long as France continued to make concessions in connection with the Treaty of Versailles we thought that a change in the Prussian mentality was still possible. The events of the last few days show that Briand was nothing but a poet.

This has happened not only on account of the Versailles Treaty, which when Hitler assumed control was already a dead letter, but because of the European policy of inopportune concessions which contributed to Hitler's fortune. Since those who wrote the Treaty of Versailles have passively allowed the cancellation of clauses of the treaty by Germany, there is no reason to be astonished at the present events.

Europe, in tolerating all infractions of the treaty, in closing its eyes to Germany's rearmament or else sanctioning it, has reinforced the sentiment that Germany makes its own law and has approved Hitler's official maxim: "The right is that which is to the interest of Germany."

As well as ratifying the principle expounded by Bethmann-Holweg—"necessity knows no law"—universal public opinion, in accepting without a word all the German measures of rearmament, has thus given post-ratification to the violation of the neutrality of Belgium, and has developed in Germany a state of mind of which the consequences cannot be calculated.

At each step which they succeed in pushing forward without encountering resistance, Germans say among themselves with a significant wink of the eye, "they are afraid."

For a long time the Battle of the Marne has been forgotten,

HUBBY'S JAUNT NEWS TO DOLORES

WIFE WHO WILL STAY AT HOME

DOLORES COSTELLO

(Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service)

But her husband will be along, too, and the voyage doesn't mean there's a divorce impending between the famous actor and his present wife, Dolores Costello.

Barrymore, who is recovering from influenza in a New York hospital, revealed his plans for the cruise today and said the party will include Diana, 14, his daughter by his marriage to Michael Strange.

Aware the presence of his first wife and her husband, Harrison Tweed, would set the gossips to gossiping, Barrymore himself laughed at the seeming strangeness of his intended company. He explained:

"Why Mrs. Tweed and I are the best of friends. We always have been, even during the period of our divorce. There can be nothing strange about her joining me and our daughter on the cruise."

He was emphatic in denouncing reports that any trouble existed between him and Dolores, who is in California with their children, Dolores 3, and John 4. He said:

"That's all damn rubbish.

"The fact is that the children were too young to make the trip across the continent. That is why they remained in California. And that is why Dolores remained with them."

John's Yachting Trip News to Dolores

By International News Service

Hollywood, March 19—"I know nothing whatsoever of this trip—in fact, this is the first I have heard of it."

This was the reaction today of Dolores Costello Barrymore, third and present wife of John Barrymore, famous stage and screen actor, to announcement in New York that Barrymore planned a yacht cruise accompanied by his second wife, Michael Strange, and her husband.

The statement came through a spokesman at the Barrymore home, who said Mrs. Barrymore had nothing to add.

KISSING BUG Stages Comeback

The little insect that a quarter of a century ago got everybody excited and caused people to go about with swollen lips due to osculation by the pest is on the loose again, scientists at the Hooper Foundation of the University of California said today.

An intensive study is being made in an effort to forestall a possible outbreak.

$30,000 Hi-Jacking

New Haven, Ct., March 19 (INS)—Armed hi-jackers today stole two trucks of the Providence Teaming Company bound for New York city with 16 tons of rayon and cotton piece goods valued in excess of $30,000.

LAW Bars Profit IN WAR

TAX PLAN TOLD TO PRESIDENT

By Associated Press

Washington, March 19—The Senate Munitions Committee assured President Roosevelt today it would have ready by April 1 a program aimed at taking the profit out of war.

Invited to the White House, the committee said that on the "larger subject of controlling industry in peace time" there was little hope of drafting legislation at this session.

Just before the visit the committee heard from John T. Flynn, attorney retained by the investigators, testimony urging a drastic war-time industrial draft which would limit salaries to $10,000 a year and take by taxation virtually all profits above 3 per cent.

Taking Profits

"To take 50 per cent of the first 6 per cent profits of corporations, and 100 per cent on all over that in excess profits.

"To limit individual incomes to $10,000, taking all over that in income taxes.

"To impose income taxes on everybody from $1,000 up in sufficient amount to cover war expense.

"To assess and collect income taxes quarterly as it is made.

"To check numerous methods of defeating income tax levies.

"Publicity of all salaries immediately upon declaration of war.

"Industrial management draft—All general officers of corporations to be registered in a draft of management and when necessary inducted into military forces.

"Regulate all new private financing through a war finance agency.

"Commandeering of essential industries and services.

WIFE DIVORCES Author Marquand

Pittsfield, March 19 (INS)—Alleging cruel and abusive treatment, Mrs. Christina Philip Sedgewick Marquand today was granted an unconditional divorce from John Philip Marquand, novelist, of Newburyport.

They were married in Stockbridge in 1922. She was granted custody of their two children.

CLAUDETTE To Stay Wedded

New York, March 19 (INS)—Claudette Colbert denied rumors of a divorce from Norman Foster here today as she prepared to return to California.

KNIVES Fail to Stir CLARK

AS ZUCKERMAN CASE EXHIBIT

Gruesome exhibits that left him unblinking and unmoved were displayed today in superior court before the eyes of Miller Frank Clark.

They were the two knives he is alleged to have used to kill Ethel Zuckerman, 18-year-old South End girl, in the Harrison avenue bakery where she worked.

One bent, the other blood-encrusted, the long bread knives were placed with the exhibits, together with a blood-stained newspaper found beside the body.

The 56-year-old defendant, who today had given up his yawning tactics and his finger-snapping of yesterday, gazed somberly at the knives but his expression did not change.

Attempted introduction of the confession claimed by police to have been made last December by Clark precipitated a wordy battle between Assistant District-Attorney Daniel J. Gillen and the chief defense counsel, George A. Douglas.

Statements Read

Judge John M. Gibbs dismissed the jury while William J. Shanahan, police stenographer, read the two purported statements, signed, he was said to have stated, that he "hit her with a knife."

This, the statement said, was a breadknife he had seized from the counter after a first knife had been plunged into her, only to bend against the breast-bone.

Clark was alleged to have said in the statement that he entered the bakery about 10 p. m. on the night of December 20, 1933, ordered five "cat pies" and resumed his importunings for Ethel Zuckerman to marry him.

He had taken her to the movies several times, the statement declared, but she had always put off he marriage pleas.

This she did now again at 10 p. m. on the murder night, the statement asserted, and Clark was declared to have said:

"I just hit her, about three or four times, I think. She kind of hollered—just one holler—and started to run to the telephone. I hit her again and she fell to the floor and I hit her with a knife."

BRITISH Note Hit as 'WEAK'

SOVIET WANTS MAILED FIST

By Associated Press

Moscow, March 19—Authorized Russian circles today termed the British note to Berlin on Germany's conscript decision an undeniable success for Germany and "an even greater capitulation by Great Britain than could have been expected."

These sources said the asserted capitulation applied to the question of German armaments as well as to the scheduled conversations in Berlin between Hitler and Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary.

Russians expressed teh opinion that instead of the "weak"note, as the British message is characterized here, teh moment demanded a strong united front of the powers against Germany.

Foreign observers are watching Sir John's forthcoming trop to Berlin, expecting the results of his talks with Hitler will have the most important reflection on negotiations March 28 in Moscow by Captain Anthony Eden, British privy seal.

The Soviet attitude, as expressed in the press, has been one of suspicion that England would make concession to Germany which might wreck the chances for a European peace agreement with Russia participating.

If such concessions were to sacrifice the proposed Eastern European securities plan, the would, observers said, probably be highly unsatisfactory to Moscow, which accepted the London peace plan, in which France collaborated, on the express condition that an "Eastern Locarno" pact of mutual assistance remain part of it.

Japan Scoffs Nazi Pact

Laughs at Soviet "Fear" of Alliance Story

By Associated Press

Tokio, March 19—A government spokesman today denied published rumors that Japan and Germany were planning to conclude a military pact.

Informed that the report originated in Moscow, the spokesman laughed and said:

"The Soviet probably is fearful of such a combination, but it can be assured it will never eventuate and has never been proposed or considered.

Public opinion as reflected in the newspapers and the comments of government leaders endorse the spokesman's assertion of Japan's aloofness and the concentration of its attention on Chinese questions.

War or Hitler's End Predicts Ludwig

but the memory of and the spirit which animated the Maid of Orleans is always alive.

The slow evolution which characterises England's manner of thinking had for its consequence a sentiment of pity for a beaten Germany which manifested itself ten years too late, when the people considered worthy of that pity had already been transformed into a redoubtable people, and the beaten power had long since become again menacing.

Compassion for poor conquered Germany touched the English pacifists to tears, while the sentiment of the camaraderie of battle for France had given place to a feeling of distrust that caused fear of a threatening adversary among the pacifist peoples of Europe.

Unity Needed at Once

They would not recognize the exact situation; victorious France, all of whose social classes were animated by pacific sentiments; joyful France, to be living in wealth in the face of Germany, all of whose classes were animated by war-like feelings; France, living in face of a conquered Germany, thirsty for conquests and revenge, in utter bankruptcy, yet arrogant.

They would not recognise that the arm varies with the hand that holds it, that one hand feels no need to use the arm while the other is forced by the deepest feelings to use it.

Today we must defend ourselves against our pacifist friends in France and England, who always imagine that shepherds can tame the wolf by allowing it to approach the flocks.

The new German law is finally going to convince Europe that it is only by consummating the threatened unity that Germany can be held in check, above all the Franco-British front, while all kindness and invitations can only render her more arrogant.

The member of the club who quits the club, slamming the door, should only be received again conditionally, instead of being allowed to make his own conditions, when he is pleased to return. If in 1861 the Southern states had been courteously asked if they wanted to rejoin the American Union, that Union would have been broken.

This is what will happen to the League of Nations if Germany is accepted anew without again imposing on her the conditions of 1920 and 1926, forcing her to prove her political philosophy corresponds to the ideas of the League of Nations.

The English idea and in part also the French, according to which Germany can be better watched inside the League of Nations than outside, will, in the face of the new law, be recognized even by ideologists as an error.

Powers armed to the teeth, uniting anew at the society tea which is a disarmament conference, will be incapable because of their armor and helmets to lift a cup of tea to their lips.

As long as the League of Nations has no means of controlling national education, schools, universities, radio and press, Germany can play a role of sabotage at Geneva, and she can always easily find other countries to follow her.

The new law has clarified the situation in a most desirable fashion. When tomorrow Hitler pretests for the hundredth time that only his pacific sentiments obliged him to promulgate the obligatory military service law. Europe will have the same feeling it had in 1907 when William II, though he proclaimed his love of peace, torpedoed The Hague conference, and in 1912 when he declared he was able to assure peace only by putting a powerful fleet into service.

Circle of Defense Needed

The Barthou policy which began to enclose Germany in a circle of defense can now be resumed. By the complete isolation of Germany, Hitler's position can also be shaken. The measures he has just taken betray a desperation which escapes all control.

For six months it has been not the third Reich ruling but the second Reich, namely the steel helmets, German nationalists and the Reichswehr.

The new law renders useless what remained of the Hitler army of S. S. and S. A. (Storm Troops), and Germans who never considered any uniforms legal but those of the old army will get rid of the brown shirts by the new adoption of tunic and helmet.

Germany's military law is the last warning, for if Europe now puts him who denounces treaties in quarantine, instead of continually making advances to him, the fear of a united Europe will transform the ideas of millions of Germans seized with bitterness, and will contribute to the downfall of the adventurers who have condemned Germany to this isolation.

This Is Life
ROBERT E. ROGERS

In the great portrait gallery of American actors the late Richard B. Harrison, famous as "de Lawd" in "The Green Pastures," has now a place secure and enduring as long as the spoken drama endures.

He stands now and forever with those beloved American actors whom for years audiences have loved in one special part and who are always thought of in connection with one play.

Joseph Jefferson in "Rip Van Winkle," Denman Thompson in "The Old Homestead," Billy Florence in "The Senator," William H. Crane in "David Harum," James A. Herne as "Uncle Nat," Stuart Robson as "Bertie the Lamb," David Warfield as "The Music Master," Frank Bacon as "Lightnin'" Bill Jones," Richard Mansfield in "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," and others of that long list.

A little over five years ago he was unknown to the theater and the public. He was about 70 when he died and for over a generation he had been a worker in the vineyard for good speech, effective elocution and imaginative interpretation of drama.

He had been a platform reader of Shakespeare and the classic drama. He had taught drama in a college of his own people down in North Carolina; he had worked in Harlem.

When Mr. Connelly chose him at first sight for the role of "de Lawd" he was afraid to take the part. He thought it might be considered irreverent. It took the persuasion of the clergy and others to overcome his reluctance.

Hit From First

From the first night the image of the tall, powerful, elderly Negro clergyman in decent black with white tie and flowing locks, captured the imagination of the public.

He was sweet and simple, dignified and serene, capable of emotion and of power. It is said that in his private life he so bore himself that he might never cast any indignity on the role he played. His fellow players called him, most naturally, "de Lawd."

Even the flippant Robert Benchley wrote tenderly of him on this last occasion he came to New York to celebrate the fifth anniversary of the play.

"Richard B. Harrison, if such a thing is possible, has achieved an even greater sweetness and power as he has walked abroad in the land, and the whole of Marc Connelly's play has taken on the aspect of a religious institution rather than a theatrical performance. It would have been impossible, I should think, to have been connected with 'The Green Pastures' in any capacity, even as property boy, without going through life in a more or less exalted state from then on. 'The Green Pastures' is a revival but it is a spiritual revival, and it is Broadway that is being revived by its return."

Of all the comment I have seen printed about the piece and its late star I have seen only one that struck an unkind note. That, as you might possibly guess, is from our friends the Communists.

Communists' Praise

"Lots of oh-so-whimsical text which is one of the major disgraces of the contemporary theater. The Negro, according to this five-year-old hit, is a lovable idiot, whose conception of the Bible is so refreshingly naive!

"Whether Mr. Connelly knows it or not, his effective lavish exploitation of a vicious cliche has spread through it states the poisonous lie that the Negro is a lovable idiot, inferior in every way, and at best an entertaining crap-shooting, sinning child, who would go directly to hell if it were not for his big-hearted humanitarian white brother."

So we are all out of step but Jim! Your Communists, of course, do not want the Negro religious, do not want him to be thought of as religious. Only Negro atheists are welcome in the Communist party—or likely to join it.

The Communists are no fools. They recognize effective counter-propaganda when they see it. All of which merely pins another decoration on the play and its author and its late star.

HOPKINS Row Near CLIMAX

DAVEY CHARGES BEFORE HOUSE

By Associated Press

Columbus, O., March 19—The battle between Governor Martin L. Davey and Harry L. Hopkins, with its charges of criminal libel and political corruption, raged toward a showdown in the Ohio Legislature today.

The House took up a resolution, already approved by the Senate, calling for an investigation of the state relief administration.

Davey's charges of waste and inefficiency and the federal relief administrator's charge that business firms seeking relief contracts were "shaken down" for $8,000 by Davey's campaign committee were in the resolution.

Meanwhile, the Governor awaited an answer from Hopkins, whom he challenged to stand trial on a charge of libel or prove himself to be a man "who hits below the belt and runs."

At the same time, Frazier Reams, Lucas county prosecutor in Toledo, made public affidavits from Hopkins.

"The affidavits showed that thousands of dollars have been collected by Governor Davey's campaign committee in Toledo and Ohio," Reams said.

He demanded a "thorough investigation" of Ohio relief administration, and declared any "sins" are chargeable to Hopkins and Frank D. Henderson, former state relief director

Asserting he was eager for Hopkins to stand trial, Davey added:

"I want the people of Ohio and the nation to know the truth, and the quicker the better.

"If and when this man, who is guilty of criminal libel, goes to trial, there will be a wave of popular indignation against his nefarious and cowardly action the like of which we have seldom seen."

A grand jury investigation of Hopkins' charges that Governor Davey's campaign committee solicited funds from firms selling goods to the Ohio Relief Commission was ordered today.

The Franklin County (Columbus) grand jury, now in session, will take up the case Thursday.

MEXICAN MOB Kills Teacher

Mexico City, March 19 (INS)—A mob of 500 villagers of Santa Rosa de Jauregui, in the state of Queretaro, assassinated the federal school teacher of their district by beating him to death with sticks, dispatches reaching here today disclosed.

He with the Feet—I laid the first brick in the new I. J. Fox building and it's a WOW! It's the place to go, brother.

He with the Pipe—'Tis well I know it. Up pops the missus last night in one of those Stardom coats that makes her look like my bride again. Everybody knows it's the famous low prices that built that new building.

'Gag' Put on Sullivan In Farnum Hearing

Sullivan had to sit down. Farnum was permitted to go on.

"I was told I was taking up too much time of the stenographers and secretaries," said Farnum. "There were many little things. I got the impression I was being hampered."

Before today's session got started there were two important corrections of impressions given the committee yesterday.

Two Corrections

Representative Herter said he had inadvertently stated the profit on a sale of a parcel of land in Hammett street as $250,000. He meant $182,000.

Farnum then appeared and was questioned about a missing page in his report on the land-takings for the North End Park and Prado.

Robert E. Cunliff, finance commission secretary, interrupted to explain to the committee, and Farnum agreed Cunliff was right. The page was not missing at all.

Farnum said he had not meant to give the impression the page was suppressed.

Farnum then went into the Prado case, commenting on the report already in the committee's hands, and said he believed the city could have had certain property for $71,000, but paid $83,050 because two lawyers representing an intervening purchaser came into the transaction.

Farnum viewed the difference as a speculative difference rather than a lawyer's fee.

Judge Kaplan, called as a witness, read a statement saying the Finance Commission has not the time nor the public standing at present to continue the Farnum inquiries and the legislature should do so.

Judge Kaplan is still a member of the Finance Commission although slated for removal. His successor has been appointed but not confirmed.

Judge Kaplan said the commission is using all the time and personnel in investigation of current city problems, the nature of which he did not state.

"Twice Told Tales"

City Councillor Henry L. Shattuck and State Senator Henry L. Parkman, both of the Back Bay, urged a legislative inquiry. Parkman, author in the Senate of a resolve similar to Representative Herter's, said:

"If city officials abuse their public trust by making personal profits at the expense of the citizens, we cannot expect our government to hold the confidence of its citizens, and our government cannot endure."

Councilor Curley, commenting on the hearing, the subject matter of which was largely gone into the last election campaign, said:

"It reminds me of Longfellow—

'Twice Told Tales.'"

E. J. Bradley, Boston broker, who made an investigation for the Finance Commission, said it was the general opinion in the bond business that it was practically impossible to sell bonds to the city except through the Legal Securities Corporation.

Bradley said it was apparent to him that this corporation never agreed to buy the bonds from the investment concerns selling them until the city had agreed to purchase the securities.

"The city always$ aid more than necessary!" asked Saltonstall.

"In most instances, yes," replied Bradley.

In Promotion Line

The following Winchester patrolmen, in the order named, are eligible for promotion to sergeant, the civil service commission announced today:

Charles J. Harold, Joseph J. Derro, Daniel I. Reardon, John J. Donlan, James F. Noonan, Archie T. O'Connell and Clarence E. Dunbury. Thirteen took the examination.

FREE STATE To Repay Loans

Philadelphia, March 19 (INS)—Within the next few weeks the Irish Free State government will begin repayment of the $6,000,000 given by 340,000 Americans to aid the Sein Feiners, according to Michael MacWhite, Irish minister to the United States.

Payment will be made at the rate of $1.25 for every dollar loaned to aid the struggle that ended in the treaty of 1922, when the Free State was established, MacWhite revealed.

EVERETT Cash Probed BY BISHOP

District Attorney Warren L. Bishop today ordered investigation of charges that municipal finance laws are being violated in Everett by illegal expenditures.

The charges, with a request for investigation and prosecution, were contained in a letter sent Bishop by City Councillors Joseph P. Doherty and Louis Ensanta.

The claimed violation, they set forth, is in connection with payments weekly in the amount of $24.96 to three investigators recently employed by the welfare department.

$185,000 Loot Returned

Mrs. Bell's Gems Left in Detective's Auto

By Associated Press

Miami Beach, Fla., March 19—A fortune in jewels taken from Mrs. Margaret Bell, wealthy New Yorker, by two masked bandits here in January, and mysteriously returned to police last night, today awaited her identification.

Detective Chief Eugene E. Bryant reported finding the loot, variously appraised at $185,000 to $250,000, in his automobile after he and an insurance company detective had responded to an anonymous phone call.

She had worn the jewelry, four pearl necklaces and four rings, a bracelet and a wrist watch of platinum and diamonds to the races at Hialeah that afternoon.

Mrs. Bell has since taken a house on an island in Biscayne bay.

U. S. To Mobilize 60,000 IN "WAR"

By Associated Press

Washington, March 19—Mobilization of approximately 660,000 soldiers in the greatest peace-time "mimic war" ever conducted in the United States is being planned by the War Department.

Details, made known in part today at the department, call for the concentration of man power at Pine Camp, New York, during August.

In addition to the entire mobile strength of the First Army, all National Guard units in the First Army area will be summoned to arms, provided Congress supplies the money.

BYRD Demands Cut IN WORKS BILL

By International News Service

Washington, March 19—Charging the administration with diverting $488,000,000 from emergency relief work to ordinary governmental expenditures, Senator Byrd (D.) Virginia, today demanded the Senate slash $3,000,000,000 from President Roosevelt's $4,880,000,000 work relief bill.

Byrd declared the administration had $1,040,000,000 of emergency appropriations now available in the treasury, unspent from the huge appropriations of the last two years. He charged the government had so much money on hand it was diverting emergency appropriations to ordinary expenditures.

HULTMAN In Fight to FINISH

OUSTER MOVE WEDNESDAY

If Eugene C. Hultman has to go out as chairman of the Metropolitan District Commission, he will go out fighting, he declared today on the eve of ouster proceedings against him tomorrow.

Hultman, former police commissioner, put down flatly any reports that he will resign under Governor Curley's fire.

"I haven't resigned," Hultman said. "I'm not going to resign. I'm going to stick right to the finish. I'm no yellow dog.

"Of course, it is not pleasant, what I am going through now, but if I have to go out, I'll go out fighting. I'm going to battle all the way."

So far as Governor Curley was concerned today, the ouster proceedings will go on before the executive council tomorrow.

So far as Attorney Charles A. Barnes, counsel for the former police commissioner, was concerned, a continuance will be demanded.

The Hultman lawyer declared that he will stand on his client's constitutional rights to hear specific accusations against him before making his defense.

The case against the ex-police commissioner will run the gamut from an inquiry into gambling "joints," houses of ill-fame, padlock proceedings, to granting of contracts for police uniforms and issuance of taxi-stand permits," it was indicated.

Summoned by the troopers were Attorney Leo Schwartz, Hultman legal advisor, and Schwartz' uncle, Samuel Goodwin; Morris Linsky, Washington street uniform manufacturer; William H. Gowell, property clerk at the police department.

Also told to appear before the governor's council were John Carty, former assistant to Schwartz; Joseph H. Walley, superintendent of police buildings, and Sergeant John F. Lyons, one-time aide to Hultman.

Lambs Go Triple A One Better

By Associated Press

Medford, Wis., March 19—Page the AAA experts—Taylor County, Wisconsin, appears to be on a pre-new deal production schedule.

GUN CUSTOMER Nabbed in Chase

After a three blocks' chase, part of which was over shed roofs and housetops, a man who tried to buy a revolved in a Massachusetts avenue pawnshop was captured today.

The shop proprietor became suspicious and called police. Just as police arrived the man ran out of the shop and tried to make his escape over rooftops. He finally was caught on a roof on Massachusetts avenue, near Beacon street, Back Bay.

20 MOSLEMS DIE In India Rioting

Karachi, India, March 19 (AP)—Twenty Mohammedans were killed and 200 wounded when police fired into them as they rioted after the execution of a fellow Moslem. The man executed was Abdul Quayam, convicted of murdering a Hindu, whom he claimed had written an offensive work about the Prophet Mohammed.

One-Punch Groom Wins Kiki Roberts as Bride

Kiki Roberts is married.

The former sweetheart of Jack "Legs" Diamond not only is married but she has settled down to life in a small town.

Kiki had been doing a fan dance and a clog during a booking at a roadhouse in Columbia, N. J., 18 miles across the state line from Easton.

The amateur athlete, employed by his brother as a beer salesman, was in the cabaret, according to Kiki's version of the romance, when an intoxicated patron seized her and demanded that she dance with him.

To the rescue dashed Ross with one punch—and the romance was born. Four days later they were secretly married by Alderman Louis Odenwelder in Easton, Kiki giving her age as one year above that of Ross.

The former Follies girl was surprised today when asked about her marriage. She believed at first the alderman had broken his word and let out the secret.

She was told that her bridegroom's family appeared to be considerably put out over the romance, two stalwart brothers of Ross having chased a long reporter off the home grounds.

She smiled and remarked:

"Well, we haven't had time to talk things over fully, but we expect to live here in Joe's own town.

"I'm all for a quiet, domestic life and I want to be just Mrs. Roberts and not Kiki Roberts any more.

"I want to forget the past, to forget Legs and have everyone forget him. His shadow has been over my life long enough."

PAIR ACCUSED In Quincy Holdup

Warrants charging armed robbery were issued in Quincy today against William FR. Ellis and Lawrence Peters, arrested yesterday in connection with the holdup of a Dorchester chain store.

Thomas J. O'Neil, 65, manager of a Quincy chain store, identified them as the pair who robbed him of $50 Saturday night.

Peters was shot in the arm during a chase yesterday. Both are charged also with robbery of Bernard Kearns, manager of another chain store in Adams street, Dorchester.

BURNS Gives Up Plans TO SEE RITES

Robert E. Burns of Hingham, charged with the death of Pr. Harold E. Johnson, his wife's first husband, abandoned plans to attend the Johnson funeral services today.

The services from Folsom Funeral Home, Belgrade avenue, Roslindale, were ordered to be only for members of the Johnson family.

So secret were the plans for the funeral that the Johnson family would not disclose the name of the minister and the undertaker declined to tell where the burial would take place.

Burns was released on $5000 bail after he had been in and out of Hingham jail several times within a few hours.

After bail was furnished, he was immediately re-arrested on a warrant charging default in an automobile case.

After his release on that charge, he faced another charge on nonpayment of taxes. This was dropped when his attorney said the money, about $40, would be paid within several days.

Driver Injured

In-Law Fails to Aid Beauty

In "Beating" Story for Salem Divorce

Salem, March 19—Mrs. Melba D. Trecartin brought her mother-in-law into probate court today in her effort to get a divorce and, after a half-hour of testimony, the case was taken under advisement.

Mrs. Trecartin, known as a Georgia beauty before her marriage 11 years ago to Robert T. Trecartin of Saugus, told Judge Edward B. O'Brien her husband had given her "an awful beating" and that her mother-in-law knew about it.

The mother-in-law, Mrs. Mary L. Trecartin, said she had "heard disturbances" in the couple's room but never saw any violence.

She denied she ever had seen any marks or bruises on the younger woman.

Judge O'Brien said:

Gray Hair

Best Remedy is Made At Home

You can now make at home a better gray hair remedy than you can buy by following this simple recipe: To half pint of water add one ounce bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it yourself at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. Barbo imparts color to streaked, faded or gray hair, making it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

PARTY Victim SLAIN

POLICE EXPECT ARRESTS SOON

Death that climaxed a stag party last night in a downtown hotel was murder, police declared today.

Several of the guests were questioned by police and others are being sought.

Lieutenant Francis M. Tiernan said he had received evidence indicating Suprenard was beaten. He said there may be arrests within 24 hours.

Attack Theory

Tiernan said the police had a theory regarding trouble that developed and an attack on Suprenard but were not at liberty to divulge it now.

Suprenard died early today.

He had been injured at the party eight hours earlier. Police were not notified until some time later when his condition became serious.

By that time the party guests had vanished. One—a Back Bay man—was found and he promised to supply the names.

Police were first told that Suprenard fell, striking his head against the wall, but they said his lips were cut and several teeth loosened.

Those present at the party came from points all over New England. The medical examiner was notified.

Mrs. Julia T. Suprenard, wife of the victim, was recently elected president of Cambridge Clover Club. He is also survived by three children, Arthur, Jr., 14; Barbara Ann, 9, and Robert, 5.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Camille Suprenard of Amherst, four brothers and three sisters also survive.

Meanwhile police were investigating the mystery death of Horace Melville, 65, widower, who was found unconscious on his feet, supported by the fence in front of his lodging house in Hancock street, West End.

Destroy Reds, Bishop Says

Backs Hearst Drive for Americanism

Communist propaganda is a living menace in American colleges and secondary schools today.

The crusade to purge the educational system of radicalism waged by the Boston Evening American and other Hearst papers is no mere cry of "wolf."

In a ringing address before the Charitable Irish Society at the Copley-Plaza, Bishop James H. Ryan drove home the point that Communism "must be stamped out, beaten, destroyed."

As president of Catholic University, Washington, Bishop Ryan is accepted as a spokesman for Catholic higher education throughout the country.

He said:

"We Irish have suffered too much as a race to barter now the strong food of American democracy for a mess of Communistic pottage.

"We can be counted on to our dying breath as against totalitarianism; we shout it to the apostles of Communism, for we wish them to know from the very beginning of the conflict who their real enemies are today.

"We shall fight it without giving or asking quarters."

To substantiate his claim that Communism was seeping into American education, Bishop Ryan quoted from a report by the commission on social studies of the American Historical Society.

The report said that educators were standing at the cross roads and were forced to choose between Fascism and Communism. The report advocated that the Communism be taught in preference.

Warning that Communism and Fascism spell the end of all freedom—of the press, of assembly, of education and of religion, the Bishop said.

"We are proud to be enemies of Communism, whether it be Russian, German, Italian, Spanish or Mexican."

TRADE EXPERT To Discuss Sales

Bowery Ball Attracts Smart Set

By BETTY ALDEN

What they do . . . a bejewelled gypsy with black curly hair and flashing eyes and a serious looking cleric make love at a table for two in a candle lit corner . . . pretty debutantes wearing masks to hide their identity are auctioned off at midnight, the highest bidder for each receiving her company exclusively for the supper dance . . . they imbibe steaming coffee and hot dogs and then have a few turns sliding up and down the ballroom on chairs . . . they wear rompers, middies, feather boas and Scotch Kilts . . .

ELLEN GRAY

What they say . . . "a Dusenberg car for that pretty slave on the auction block" . . . one dashing blade calls for a peek at the ankles of the girl he bids for . . . another bidder-in can't spare more than 10 cents, no matter how much beauty and charm are at stake . . . someone bids a nickel for Sammy, the auctioneer.

* * *

At Bowery Ball

WE WENT TO THE Bowery Ball at the Vendome last evening to find out what Boston society's idea of the Bowery is and these are a few of the impressions we recall . . .

With a few exceptions the costumes were outlandish . . . Ellen Gray, the chairman of the committee for the party, wore a very formal yellow taffeta gown, fashioned with the feminine ruffles and frills of the Gay Nineties, and confided to us that it was made in the '90s for a relative in Washington . . .

Nancy Faxon, wearing an exact replica of the wedding dress worn by Norma Shearer in "Smiling Through," drew a fabulous sum from Robert Faxon when she was auctioned off . . .

It was quite a strain on the aesthetic sense of the onlookers to go from the sublime of these dainty old fashioned costumes to the ridiculous of Jean Kiley's high laced boots, red stockings, red, black and white plaid dress and tiny feathered hat . . . or the knee length skirt of Claire Doran, who drew quite a following off-stage because a dollar bill was tucked neatly into her round garter . . .

After Jane Bogardus made several pirouettes on the auction block she was deemed worth a huge sum to Charlie Vallendar and then Leslie Blake was bid for and won by Freddie Allen . . .

Betsy Byron Wears Gingham

MOLLY BOWDITCH and her pal, Mary Bird, were among the less conspicuously dressed, though in any other gathering their attire would be extremely "daring" . . . both wore pajamas of bright hues . . . Though not in fancy dress Marjorie English was one of the belles of the party . . . Cunning is the only word to describe Betsy Byron in her red and white checked gingham . . . there was feverish bidding for Sally Byron but her fiance apparently was prepared to pay well for her and did . . . Sally's blue middy suit blended perfectly with Jimmie's peasant linen outfit . . .

A pre-war dress of raspberry silk graced Bobbie Hastings . . . Frances Shea chose an Elizabethan costume of scarlet velvet with the traditional ruff around her neck.

Bob Lawrence's villainous rig, sweeping black cape and heavy whiskers, didn't seem to terrify Eleanor Swift, who enjoyed a lone tete-a-tete with him between dances . . . Not content with being the pet of the stag line at most of the deb parties, Ruth Edmands had to be the belle of the Bowery in her Mae Westish makeup . . .

Peering still further, we found Roger Wellington, Kathleen Moran, Connie Cole and David Scannell discussing the fun they had at the preliminary cocktail party at Claverly Hall at Harvard . . . and Kathleen Maynard in a light hearted discussion with Walter Tufts . . .

With a cocktail or two, Mimi Clark and George Black were toasting the burlesque queens of the pre-war period, who watched the doings from their posters hung around the ballroom . . .

And last but far from least . . . Ellen Gray's father, disguised as a gay old blade of the '90s, fooling everyone with his makeup . . .

Mrs. Frederick S. Whitwell Is Pourer

IT SEEMED VERY APPROPRIATE to find Mrs. Frederick S. Whitwell pouring tea at the reception which was given in observance of the 19th anniversary of the incorporation of the New England Historic Genealogical Society yesterday afternoon . . . Mrs. Whitwell has made a concentrated study of antiques and historical data for years, and shares her knowledge with groups of society women at informal lectures from time to time . . .

Yesterday the cups of tea she poured were passed by Mary and Margaret Otis . . . Mrs. Walter Atherton, accompanied by her husband, and gowned in fuschia combined with black, was one of the many guests served by this attractive pair of sisters . . . Mary, tall and dark, wore an emerald green tweed suit, and Peggy accented her fair complexion and blue eyes with a navy blue ensemble . . .

Mrs. John C. Chase, whose husband is president of the society, also poured at the huge carved oak table-desk which served as the tea table . . . Banks of spring flowers and yellow candles lent a festive atmosphere to the very dignified room in which the tea was served . . .

Encountered among the many prominent Beacon Hill members of the society were Mrs. C. Stephen Heard and her mother-in-law, Mrs. Charles S. Heard, Miss Martha Houser, Mrs. George C. Houser, Miss Ruth Reuter and her mother, Mrs. W. J. Reuter, guests from Milwaukee; Judge and Mrs. Ralph Estes, Miss Mary E. Eliot, Miss Adelaide Eliot, Miss Ella Eliot, Captain Thomas G. Frothingham, Mrs. Frank L. Nason, Mrs. Edward Burlingame Hill, one of the most distinguished appearing ladies in the gathering . . . Her black velvet gown was brightened by a white sequin bodice . . .

Guild Plans Bridge

Miss Mary Curley Heads Sponsors

THAT SOCIETY will turn out for the Fashion Show and Bridge in the Hotel Copley Plaza on Saturday, sponsored by the Guild of the Infant Saviour, is already assured.

Mrs. William V. McDermott, president of the Guild has appointed Mrs. James P. O'Hare as chairman of the party.

She will have the assistance of Mrs. Frederick A. Keyes, Mrs. Harry P. Cahill, and Mrs. F. W. O'Brien.

Patronesses

Mrs. Fred Quinn, Mrs. Norbert J. Reilly and Mrs. M. L. Ryan will have charge of the music.

Miss Mary Curley has the list of patronesses which includes Mrs. Frederick W. Mansfield, Mrs. Edward C. Donnelly, Mrs. P. A. O'Connell, Mrs. Thomas E. O'Connell, Mrs. Frazier O'Leary, Mrs. Joseph P. Carney, Mrs. Harry P. Cahill, Mrs. John A. Connor, Mrs. Frederick J. Crosby, Mrs. Joseph Doherty, Mrs. Edward Donovan, Miss Julia Prendergast, Mrs. William Drummey, Mrs. Daniel J. Lynch, Mrs. T. J. Fahey and Miss Mary Lyons.

Mannequins have been chosen from well known Boston families and include Ellen Bottomley, Cappy Ryan, Kathleen and Clare Moran, Frances Shea, Catherine Donnelly, Mary Fuller, Ellen Gray, Dorothy Poor, Mrs. Robert McGarty, Mrs. Joseph R. McCoole and Mrs. C. F. Bowen.

Young Folk

Three popular children, Virginia Reilly, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norbert Reilly of Belmont; Sheila McLaughlin, grand-niece of Cardinal O'Connell, and Joan Green, niece of Mrs. William V. McDermott will model the latest vogue for the very young with Master Robert McCarty doing honors for the very young man.

Assisting on the committee for candy are Frances Whoriskey, Mary O'Hare Helen and Eleanor Keyes, Aurriel Joyce, Eleanor Spillane, Peggy Green, Ruth Connolly, Claire Stanton, Marjorie Page, Mary Roberts and Marjorie Sullivan.

MODEL for Fashion Benefit

'Your Darling and Mine'

Slogan Wins Shirley Temple Award

Shirley Temple, "Your Darling and Mine," is the winning title in the recent contest held in an endeavor to find a line that would suitably describe the lovely little Fox star.

The contest was held by the Boston Evening American and the Keith Memorial Theater in connection with the film "The Little Colonel" in which Shirley starred.

Many thousands of suggestions were received by the Contest Editor, but in the opinion of the judges "your darling and mine," was the one which seemed to define the place the little star occupies in the hearts of the American theater-going public.

Herbert D. Miller, 9 Lexington Terrace, Waltham, is the originator of the winning title. At the moment, Mr. Miller is away on business so his little daughter, Peggy, represented her father today when the prize check of $15.00 was awarded by Mr. Thomas Bailey, division chief for Fox Films.

Next 10 Winners

The next ten winners of $1.00 each are Gloria Keith, 180 Bolton street, Portland, Me.; Muriel Davis, 1209 Boylston street, Boston; Lester W. Daniels, 22 Grafton street, Greenwood; Rose Needham, 5 Hefferon street, Allston; Marie A. Mera, 3 Chestnut Terrace, Jamaica Plain; Bertha M. Snow, 7 Prospect street, Saugus; Mrs. Henry M. Dorgan, 1 Laurel street, Ellsworth, Me.; Mrs. E. Sawyer, 1340 Commonwealth avenue, Allston; Thelma Winders, 77 Walnut street, Atlantic; and Claire Cavagrande, 109 Princeton street, Medford.

Richard Croteau, 1528 Eastern avenue, Malden; Mrs. T. Scott, 58 Tileston street, Everett; Helen Sherlock, 8 Essex street, Somerville; Dorothy Holland, 38 Bigelow street, Cambridge; Mrs. Culley, 17 Grant street, Somerville.

Trinity Salon

THE REV. FRANCIS E. LOW, S. J., professor of philosophy and religion at Boston College, will speak at the Trinity College Alumnae Salon on Friday evening at the home of Mrs. Walter J. Rose, 25 Chestnut Hill terrace, Chestnut Hill.

Father Low will discuss Contemporary Philosophy enlarging on "The Confusion of Modern Thought," illustrating his points from the prominent questions of the present day.

Miss Theresa O'Brien of Quincy is chairman of this Salon and has for her assistants the following: Miss Katherine Brodbine, sister of the hostess, the Misses Martha Logan, Mary McMahon and Ruth Nagle, Catherine Crimmings, Mary McGillicuddy, May Skahan, Mrs. John H. Hession, Mrs. Thomas L. Ryan and Marie O'Brien.

For the convenience of the alumnae and their friends, reservations may be made through members of the committee mentioned above or with the general chairman of the salon committee, Miss Elizabeth W. Loughran, Boston.

Recital Planned

Compositions of two Boston University instructors will be included in the college of music recital to be presented tomorrow evening in Jacob Sleeper Hall, under the direction of Miss Margaret Starr McLain.

Luncheon Planned

FINAL ARRANGEMENTS for the luncheon to be given Saturday at the Repertory Theater, to members of the Clare Tree Company and the orchestra, were discussed yesterday afternoon by the members of the B. U. Women's Council.

This meeting, which was the last meeting of the Six Plays Committee, was held at 146 Commonwealth avenue and Mrs. Henry L. Harriman, presided.

The luncheon will be served in the lower lounge of the theater by a committee headed by Miss Jane Hobart, and including Mrs. Charles E. Parchurst, Dean Lucy Jenkins Franklin and Miss Vere Stearns.

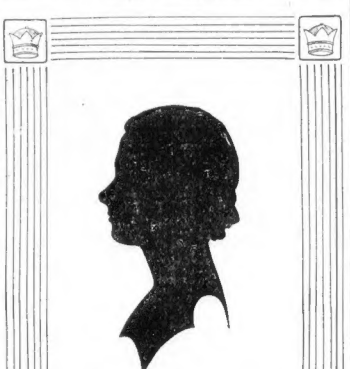
Members of the cast of "Under the Lilacs" include Velma Royden, who was for four years the leading actress in the Boston Repertory Company, Betty Macdonald, Jewel Morse, William Clifford, Doris Furnside, Kenneth Randall and Curtis Williams.

Other committee members who will attend the luncheon are Mrs. Henry H. Meyer, who is in charge of checking for the plays; Mrs. Richard H. Smith, sponsor of junior books; Mrs. Robert F. Allen, tickets; and Mrs. Metcalf Melcher, chairman of ushers.

Sponsors for the plays are Mrs. Joseph B. Ely, Mrs. Frank G. Allen, Mrs. Gaspar G. Bacon, Mrs. Charles Sumner Bird, Mrs. H. Addington Bruce, Mrs. Alvan T. Fuller, Miss Frances G. Curtis, Mrs. Roland G. Hopkins, Mrs. Mark A. Lawton, Miss Grace Nichols, Mrs. Edith Nourse Rogers, Mrs. Henry E. Sawyer, Mrs. Robert W. Sayles, Mrs. Frederic S. Snyder and Mrs. Henry D. Tudor.

Debutante Silhouettes

Number Twenty-Three



THE usual address of this post-deb is Cambridge, but this winter she has been living on Arlington street, in town. She made her debut last year with a ball at the Ritz, which followed a very elaborate dinner in Dedham.

Her slender figure and wavy blond hair are seen in almost every society fashion show, and she is prominent in the affairs of the Cushman Club. Do you know her?

Miss P. C.—Betty Alden will gladly send you the original drawing of your silhouette if you care to have it.

Books on Parade

By MILES ALDEN

DECORATIVE ART:— Edited by C. G. Holme—Studio Publications.

To those interested in modernistic houses and furniture this 30th annual issue of the Studio Year Book is heartily recommended.

Its compilation of photographs illustrates clearly the reaction of modern designers toward a more livable, and exceedingly less angular, type of construction.

In furniture particularly, this trend toward curving lines and more stress on beauty is indicated. The editor states in the introduction that human values are creeping back into modernistic design.

Much emphasis is laid upon the proper use of color and the importance of avoiding, wherever possible, a deadly white.

Included in the book are pictures of several rooms which cost as low as $200 to outfit.

CLAUDIUS THE GOD:—By Robert Graves—Smith and Haas.

This latest work by Mr. Graves needs no recommendation to those who enjoyed its predecessor, "I Claudius."

A complete story in itself, this sequel starts with accession of that confirmed Republican Claudius to the Imperial throne.

With perverse determination that things must get worse before better he marries his own niece and adopts as his heir her son, the future Nero.

Luncheon

Among the guests were Mrs. Anna Doherty McInerny, Mrs. Stanton Read White, Mrs. Maurice H. Richardson, Jr., and the Misses Mary Curley, Frances Curley, Helen T. Kelly, Barbara O'Connor, Ann Maloney, Grace Sullivan and Margaret Sullivan.

Dinner

MR. AND MRS. CLARENCE R. HORTON are giving a dinner at the Hotel Puritan this evening in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Clarke Atwood, who are sailing for Europe on the Majestic Friday.

Among the guests at the dinner will be Mr. and Mrs. William P. Lyle, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur F. Mason, Mr. Chester McNeill, Mrs. Jane Smith, Judge and Mrs. Ralph Smith and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Spaulding.

Dinners Planned

SEVERAL HOSTESSES are planning to entertain before Mr. Claude Bragdon's lecture at Steinert Hall on Friday, March 29.

Mrs. I. Tucker Burr is planning a tea, and Mrs. Harcourt Amory will entertain a dinner party.

Additional patronesses for this lecture are Mrs. William Jenney, Mrs. Glover Crocker, Mrs. Gorham Brooks, Mrs. Ronald Ferry, Miss Beatrice Williams, Mrs. Harcourt Amory, Jr., Mrs. Sherwood Rollins, Mrs. Paul Courtney and Miss Louise Condit.

HEAVEN HIGH—HELL DEEP

'Rabbit' Initiated

By NORMAN ARCHIBALD

Three months after the United States declared war I was enlisted as Private, First Class, in the aviation service of the Signal Corps. Three more months and I was one of the lucky ones ordered abroad. At Issoudon, the American Aviation Center, we helped build the camp and lay miniature railroads—in the mud. Without any previous training we started learning to fly the Nieuports, fastest and most dangerous of war planes. We talked, dreamed flying night and day. Then one day I made a "solo" flight. How easy it was! A test pilot was killed, but his death didn't cool my love for flying. One day I was taking my altitude test. It was easy enough until I started to come down again. Below me all I could see was blackness.

The wind shrieks through the rigging. The steep dive brings a sensation of terrific speed. Blinded to all sense of balance, direction or view, but knowing eventually the plane will come out of this oblivion, I continue in a vertical nose dive.

Light—I pull up. The beautiful sunny day is gone, it is pouring rain and the country is strange.

Not a familiar landmark and my gasoline is low. Just as I plan to land, a circular wood, one of the marks on the cross-country flight, comes into view. Twenty miles from my starting point! In a driving rain pelting pebbles against my face, I head for home.

There are the familiar hangars and in another moment I am over the field.

It is desolate and bare. Not a soul stirs, not a plane is in sight but as I land, soaking wet, cold and tired, two mechanics come out to guide my ship as I taxi in.

"Where in hell were you in this awful storm?" he asks.

"In heaven — above it — no storms up there," and as we walk to the barracks I tell him, as always, about my experience.

He whacks me on the back and laughs about my "sitting with the angels for protection."

Storm Clouds

The barograph registered a good ascent, even flight at twelve thousand feet, an even descent to nine thousand feet and then showed that the plane had performed every sort of gyration.

This was, of course, due to storm clouds and the instructor, knowing conditions I was forced to descend in, gave me full credit for the altitude test.

* * *

Severe and cruel, they made or unmade a flyer and if successfully performed the pilot was almost certain to fly "pursuit."

The crucial test of ability, physical condition, nerve, nerves, daring and an adventurous disposition, it was the peak of our training and the height of our dreams.

We had reached the Acrobatic school! The school where blasted hopes, loss of desire to fly, altered air careers and frequent deaths stalked on every side.

Beauchamp and I walked over to the Acrobatic Field. A fuselage, all that remained of a wrecked plane, was propped up on boxes. Sitting in the seat of this skeleton, grim reminder of some fatal accident, was Rabbit-Foot. We christened him "Rabbit-Foot" because of his many miraculous escapes from death. A smug smile of contentment lighted his face as the instructor told him how to move the controls to perform a certain stunt.

"Harder, why you act as if it would come off," said the instructor.

Rabbit walked over to a waiting plane, climbed in and rose into the air. In silence we watched for the first acrobatic ever attempted by one of our group. At an altitude of three thousand feet he turned and, as instructed, flew directly over the field.

He throttled his motor and was ready to stunt. Without warning the plane went into a vertical nose dive and we watched breathlessly as it dove towards the ground.

"It's the end of Rabbit," someone whispered and then, within fifty feet of the ground, his plane levelled out, flew past us at a terrific speed and landed in a vineyard a quarter of a mile away.

We saw him, white as chalk and gasping for breath, running toward us.

"Rabbit! What happened?"

"Rabbit! How in the world—s"

"Well . . . the . . . rudder did come off," he choked.

He kicked it hard, all right—so hard that he kicked it loose from the ball and socket and only with the rudder held parallel in space was the plane under partial control. With miraculous luck, he escaped a fatal drop.

Again—lucky "Rabbit-Foot."

* * *

Acrobatic Field demanded that stunts he performed to a nicety. The vrille, renversement, virage and vertical side slip were most important.

The motor is throttled, the plane loses speed and its nose, which now has a tendency to drop, is held up by gradually pulling back on the stick.

The plane is ready to fall. It flutters for a moment and when about to drop the left rudder is given a quick kick and held in that position while the stick is, at the same instant, pulled over and back to the right. The ship, now a free body in the air with no power to sustain it, must necessarily drop.

The nose points to the earth. The plane spins rapidly. Altitude is quickly lost.

The rudder is straightened, the stick put in the center, slightly forward, and the plane stops spinning to come out in a glide. The motor is started, stick pulled back and normal flight is resumed.

If the stick is not in the forward position the plane will immediately go into another spin. The vrille is finished but the pilot learns he has dropped eight hundred feet instead of an intended four hundred feet.

Up he goes again, plane to spin for six hundred feet this time and, repeating the performance, comes out. The first vrille was a profitable loss and he realizes the necessity of quick thinking and prompt action.

The Renversement

The renversement requires more skill than the vrille since the Nieuport has a natural tendency to spin and it is difficult to perform this stunt without falling into a vrille. The pilot goes up to a safe altitude, usually three thousand feet, the plane is in full flight with motor wide open and the stick is given a quick jerk backwards.

Side Slip

The ship quickly starts up, the rudder is immediately given a sharp kick and the plane turns over on its back.

Upside down, hanging by his straps, the pilot quickly throttles the motor and the nose of the machine, heavy with weight, drops. The stick is pushed forward and as the plane comes out in a dive the stick is pulled back, the motor is opened and the plane sails in an opposite direction.

By putting the control stick hard over (to the left or the right as the case may be) the plane is thrown on its side into a vertical position.

Pulling the stick back in a circular motion and to its former position the plane turns, owing to its speed and wide open motor, without slipping. This is a quick, effective movement and no altitude is lost as is the case of a renversement.

The vertical side slip.

With preluding acrobatics mastered the pilot is ready for this final and most difficult stunt of all. The motor is throttled, the stick slowly moved to the right and as the control is pushed over the plane tips more and more onto its side. Owing to this position the elevator and rudder are reversed.

The elevator acts as the rudder and the rudder acts as the elevator. As the plane continues to topple on its side, "top rudder" must be given to hold the nose from dropping.

Thus, with the top of the rudder pushed to its limit and the stick forward and over as far as possible, the plane's wings are perpendicular instead of parallel to the earth.

The wings present no supporting surfaces so the plane suddenly, with the speed of a rocket, drops in a death-like slip.

The pilot's body, held only by straps, hangs from the plane. The rush of air caused by this sudden descent has the force of a hurricane, sufficient to rip off his goggles and even tear off his helmet.

Altitude is so instantaneously lost that no sooner has the hazardous slip begun than it is time to come out. Pulling back the stick in a circular motion to a position of normal glide, the plane is brought out in a spiral.

Should the rapid descent be halted suddenly and the machine not allowed to come out in a spiral the wings would be ripped off by the terrific strain.

Dear was the price paid by many trying this vertical side slip. Unaware of the terrific speed and sudden loss of altitude they crashed to their death.

* * *

A plane landed. Its propeller was still and a mechanic rushed out to start the motor.

"Contact," he called.

"Wait a minute," answered the pilot, who crawled out of the cockpit and stood vomiting and deathly sick by the side of the ship.

He tried with all his might to overcome this illness and went up again and again, but to no avail. Heartbroken, he was transferred to observation where he could do straight flying, but never fly "pursuit." His physical condition would not stand the strain.

Acrobatics had finished them. Many hopes for Classe were crushed.

Many others—had enough!

They had lost their courage and were through. These were severe, sometimes sad and often fatal ends . . .

"Stove" flying reigned supreme. Stories were told and retold; flights flown and reflown; some loved the thrill, others were silent, still others, frightened by some recent experience, had become overly cautious and one by one many disappeared.

Finished with acrobatics we are moving to Field Seven. A truck waits. Beauchamp, Follmer and I climb in.

Early the next morning we report. A leader is selected. Five men are chosen and told their respective positions.

We take off, gain altitude and fly, one following the other, in a circle. The leader starts in a straight line of flight, with motor slightly throttled, and the others fly into their designated positions.

The five planes are now in a V. Straight flying only is done in this first flight so the pilot may become accustomed to holding his position.

For two hours we fly over the country.

The Circus

This is the defense maneuver, originated by the great German ace, Baron von Richthofen. The leader signals by rocking his plane, turns and flies in a circle. In single file the other planes follow. Thus a tight circle is formed and maintained until another signal to resume the original formation is given.

To change directions as a unit the leader signals and does a renversement. The two pilots flying positions one and two on the right perform vertical virages to the right.

Pilots one and two on the left execute vertical virages to the left. They fly into positions behind the leader and are now headed in the opposite direction. Planes which were left are now right and those which were right are now left.

When a pilot finishes this training, he flies by instinct more than ever, for his attention has been on other planes. Movements to alter his position from time to time becomes natural.

The Combat Field.

Early one afternoon Beauchamp and Follmer finished their formation flying and moved to Field Eight. I had one more flight to complete, but by 10 o'clock the next morning was on my way.

The silhouette of an aeroplane, cut out of canvas, was fastened to the ground. The two planes roared over the field, turned and dove for the dummy. With the earth but a few feet beneath they zoomed, turned, soared and again swooped down.

So dangerously near the ground they came, that we held our breath.

HIGH SCHOOL TRAGEDY

By Maxine Canty

Julie Questioned by Police

SYNOPSIS

Julie Martin, she's all of 17, is relating what happened after her French teacher, pretty Constance (Connie) Sinclair, was found shot dead at a desk in her (Miss Sinclair's) apartment.

Julie has startled her mother and interests her father, a lawyer, by telling that she and her boy friend, Dicky Ward, had visited the apartment the previous afternoon, a few hours before the murder.

She had returned a fountain pen which she had borrowed from Miss Sinclair. Newspaper reports make known that the teacher was slain about 10 o'clock that night.

The police went to the apartment upon receipt of a mysterious telephone call informing them that Miss Sinclair had been slain. Julie's young brother, Allen, also a high school pupil, leaves the breakfast table soon after the family starts discussing the tragic news.

Classes did not amount to much that day. Julie, an assistant after hours in Principal Perkins' office, is summoned by him to meet Police Inspector O'Brien who is beginning the investigation. This is Julie's account of their first interview:

CHAPTER II

Inspector O'Brien was rather nice, awfully gentle and quite unlike a detective while he was talking to me. He asked me to sit down. Mr. Perkins coughed nervously. He said:

"I'm sorry, Julie, that you must go through this. I did not suppose any students would be questioned."

"Every angle is worth investigating in a case like this," said Mr. O'Brien pleasantly.

"I don't mind," I hastened to assure him.

He smiled. "Suppose you tell us all you know about Miss Sinclair, Julie," the inspector suggested.

"Rather Strange"

"I believe you visited Miss Sinclair with a friend about 4:30 yesterday afternoon," he stated, consulting the paper. This time I saw the signature, Anna Sardoni. It was evidently a signed statement from her.

"Yes," I said, and then I told him about the pen, blushing a little in front of Mr. Perkins. He didn't seem to be listening. So I went on without much embarrassment.

"So you returned the pen to her later?"

"Yes, sir. Dicky—Richard Ward—and I met Miss Sinclair on the steps of the apartment house and we all went in together.

"Did Miss Sinclair unlock the apartment house door?"

The Inspector made a note. "Rather strange," he commented.

"She and the apartment door was always open. There are only four apartments, and whoever comes in at 11:30 o'clock at night turns the latch on. After that she said one has to have a key."

"Easy when for anyone to enter," said Mr. Perkins.

"Well—" I hesitated.

"Yes?" prompted the Inspector.

"Not so easy, at least it wasn't for us."

"Why not?"

"Because Mrs. Sardoni popped out her door as we were going up the stairs. She scared me, Miss Sinclair laughed and said that she always did that. She said she was used to it now, but that it bothered her at first. I guess that is the way an apartment house manager has to do to know what is going on."

The Inspector smiled, but Mr. Perkins just looked out of the window. I thought I'd better hurry on to the important things.

Door Unlocked

"Miss Sinclair said, too, that she herself had always lived in a house, and that she could never remember to lock her own door, even at night."

"It would be interesting," mused the Inspector, "to know how many people knew of that careless habit of hers."

"Oh, I imagine a good many," I chimed in, for which I had some regrets later, "for Dicky said she laughed about it in class one day."

"And what class is he in?" inquired the officer.

I told him. He asked Mr. Perkins for the enrollment list of that group, and the Principal got it from the outer office. The Inspector looked it over without commenting.

He asked me some more questions. I told him that while we were there, Miss Sass and Miss Whelton, who lived across the hall, came in to invite Miss Sinclair to a movie, but that she refused because she had some letters to write.

The Inspector nodded and told Mr. Perkins they had called again on their way out, but that she had refused again for the same reason. I read more in the evening paper about the letter she was writing.

"The teachers stopped at about 7 o'clock. There was another caller about 8 who left at 8:30." He consulted Mrs. Sardoni's paper again as he made this statement. "As far as we know, this person was the last to see her alive, if this person happened to be the murderer."

I was all trembly with the thought of hearing about the case direct like this, so to speak. But the inspector turned to me again. "Just two more questions, Miss Julie."

I was disappointed. I would have liked to know who that person who left at 8:30 was. Evidently Mrs. Sardoni had told him.

"First," he was saying, "suppose you describe to us the pen you borrowed from Miss Sinclair."

"Well," I answered, "it was a sort of mottled green, giving the effect of glass. I am not sure of the make; it was a lady's pen with a green gold band around it."

The inspector was making some notes. He continued to write as he asked, "Any identifying marks you noticed?"

Pen a Clue

"Nothing. Oh, yes, her monogram was on it, CBS, engraved on the gold band."

"Good. You are sure you returned it?"

"Oh, positive." (Dicky later confirmed this. Little did I ever dream how important that pen was going to be to me!)

"That is a strange thing, Miss Julie, for it has now disappeared. The letter was written in ink, yet there was not a pen of any description to be found in the place. If you are sure," I realized then how keen and hard his eyes could be, "you returned it."

"I know I did!" I exclaimed, "why she had it in her hand and sort of waved it when she told Miss Sass she had letters to write."

"Then perhaps the pen will lead us to the murderer."

And did I shudder later when I recalled that remark! You're asking me, too.

"One other thing. Do you remember any more conversation that might interest us?"

"No-o," I answered slowly, thinking hard.

"What else did you talk about?"

"We talked about a book she was reading from the Book Shop; they rent books out, you know. It was a biography of the man who wrote 'Alice.'"

"Herman Melville," said Mr. Perkins. "I found that book on her desk this morning. If you don't want it, Inspector, I'll return it to the Shop."

"No, I don't believe it would be of any use to us. Well, Miss Julie, I guess that's all. You have been very helpful, and I may need you again. Now, if Melvin Wright is waiting outside, send him in, will you?"

Offers Her Help

"Yes, sir. Good-bye. Do call me if I can help any more."

As I went through the door, Inspector O'Brien said to Mr. Perkins: "This Wright boy was the caller who left last night at 8:30."

I told Melvin to go in, but I shuddered when he passed me. Could he have killed anyone? I knew the story of his relation to Miss Sinclair, as did everyone else in school.

Miss Sinclair was sympathic. Most of the teachers had the policy of setting their lips when Melvin entered the class, keeping on the alert, and starting things first; I mean they hopped on him at the slightest thing he did or said, and kicked him out on any pretext, glad to be rid of him.

Miss Sinclair was different. She had lots of patience; she talked to him, and she tried to reform him.

He behaved pretty well in her class, and all the boys kidded him about having a crush on her, until he blackened Jack Gibson's eye.

Then she found out he had stolen some money from another teacher's desk, and had spent it on some girl down town. She reported him, and after that he seemed to hate her as much as he had adored her.

He was on probation now, and Miss Sinclair had to sign his parole blank each week.

As he opened the door, Mr. Perkins was saying, "O'Brien, this chap Wright is the school's problem boy, I'll admit. He has caused every teacher here a lot of trouble at one time or another, but I hardly think he would go so far as to shoot one of them!"

Melvin stood in the doorway. As the principal finished speaking, he laughed that hard, sneering laugh of his.

I have never heard a harder, more rasping voice than the inspector's suddenly became. He said: "Young man, this is no time for your wise-cracking. Close the door!"

Continued Tomorrow

Knit a Blouse and Hat Pair

By Annice Brink

ANNY BLATT—whose name resounds with fame both in Paris and over-here as a designer of knitwear—has designed this delightful blouse, separate cape-collar and hat set. Done in pastels it will make your new town suit that much smarter and richer. If you wish for directions on the blouse, cape and hat, write to Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, Boston Evening American, and please inclose a good-sized stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Girls Tell What Makes Ideal Man

By SHEILAH GRAHAM

Promising young men may be very successful, but most women prefer the man who pays cash.

This is the gist of the heaves and sighs heard by your correspondent when she spent the sunny days of last week trying to get the lowdown on what—through female spectacles—makes the Ideal Man.

Your correspondent is depressed on the subject. She doubts whether such amazing creatures as envisioned by the following females exist. But she leaves it to her readers to judge.

A STENOGRAPHER . . . My ideal man? He must be tall—at least six feet high—broad shouldered, straight thick hair (masculine curls are at a discount these days, S. G.), a good dancer, a smoker, a moderate drinker, a moderate eater, sympathetic, kind, truthful, capable of making decisions and sticking to them.

A SALESGIRL . . . My ideal man needn't necessarily be good-looking—although I wouldn't object to his being easy on the eyes. But he must be oozing with sex appeal.

He must have had lots of affairs so he'll know how to make love to me properly—this baby doesn't like amateurs. He must be as fond of me as I am of him—lopsided love has never appealed to me.

AN ACTRESS . . . It will be easier if I eliminate the things my ideal man must not be or do. He mustn't play golf to excess, he mustn't fish or shoot to excess. In fact he mustn't have any all-absorbing hobby—except me.

MOTHER OF FOUR SPEAKS

There are only two things essential for my ideal man: A sense of humor—I'm the only thing he must take seriously—and an adequate amount of money—I like nice things.

A MOTHER OF FOUR . . . It's been so long since I thought of ideal men I don't know where to begin. Ask me questions and I'll do my best to answer them.

Me: "Must he be handsome?"

M. O. F.: "No—too many other women would be after him—I know—my husband was handsome."

Me: "Must he boss you?" M. O. F.: "NO."

Me: "Must he be generous?" M. O. F.: "Yes, if he realizes charity begins at home."

Me: "Must he have money?" M. O. F.: (with a glance at her soiled hands and four children) "Yes."

A DEBUTANTE: . . . My Ideal Man? Is there any such animal, my dear? All right, if you insist.

He must be tall and handsome—just like they are in the fairy-tale books. He must play the piano or be a bottle baincey or something—so convenient to be sure of having someone to amuse our guests when we give parties.

He must have a private income so he won't be working all the time. He must consider me the most beautiful girl in the world.

MUMMY, I DON'T LIKE TO HUG AUNTIE RUTH
I KNOW WHY SUE SAID THAT, BOB! BUT IT'S HARD TO SPEAK OF PERSPIRATION ODOR IN UNDERTHINGS—
WHY DON'T YOU TIP RUTH OFF TO LUX, BETH?
RUTH TOOK BETH'S HINT AND HOW—
I WANT AUNTIE RUTH TO KISS ME GOOD NIGHT, TOO!
IF SHE HAS TIME, SUE! SHE'S GOING TO A PARTY—SHE'S GOT LOTS OF ADMIRERS BESIDES YOU THESE DAYS!
LUX
For all

AVOID OFFENDING—

It's easy to avoid offending people! Just Lux lingerie after each wearing! Lux removes perspiration odor completely—saves colors, too! Avoid soaps with harmful alkali and cake-soap rubbing—these are apt to harm fabrics—fade colors. Lux has no harmful alkali. Safe in water, safe in Lux!

Reserve COLD-CREAM for Privacy OF BOUDOIR

Question: This question is probably a little out of your line, but I do wish you could answer it for me. Do you think it is wise for women to go around the house in a complexion pack, or with hair scrambled while husbands are about? Don't you think that women should try to look as neat in their homes as as a party?
Boston. MRS. LAURA D. T.

Answer: Somebody is always dragging out that old stand-by about looking pretty and holding hubby's love. Self-respect demands that a woman look as well as she can at all times, but I would hate to think that a man's affection could not survive the sight of his wife in a complexion pack. Husbands don't always look particularly handsome around the house, yet they don't seem to worry about losing love. However, it is an excellent practice to try to appear lovely at all times and reserve your "cold-creamings" for the privacy of the boudoir.

Question: My hair is extremely fine and silky, and has never taken a good permanent. It is quite thin this year, and while I need a permanent very badly, I am afraid it will only make it look worse. What is your opinion? MOLLY McE.
Arlington.

Not having seen your hair, it is extremely difficult to say whether it would take a good permanent or not. You can always obtain a test curl at the hairdresser's and I would advise you to do this first before deciding on a permanent. If you do decide to get one, don't use water after the first finger wave; substitute brilliantine. Water is apt to destroy the wide lines, and produce small corrugated ones.

Spring Fragrance

POSED BY BETTE DAVIS

By THE BEAUTY EDITOR

IF YOU ARE looking for a fragrance suggestive of spring and the clean freshness of growing things, there is an exciting, new out-of-doors type of perfume.

Bracing as mountain air, and invigorating as breeze-swept Scottish heather after April rain, is this distinguished "woodsy" blend.

It has been called the sportswoman's own perfume, because it suggests the characteristic tang of tweeds and woolens. The aromatic scent of freshly cut wood, the clean smell—just slightly sharp—of our Cape Cod dunes in springtime, are all blended in this rare perfume.

Its hearty fragrance is the rara sort that never seems to tire. If you are looking for an escape from the tedious and the monotonous—you can do no better than invest in a bottle of this fragrance. It comes direct from the Paris headquarters of a world-famous perfumer, and I am told that it has been in the making for over a year and a half.

I think you will agree with me that this blend is a daring departure from the usual conception of a perfume. It is the translation in scent of the pleasant smoky odor of Scotch tweed. If you are an out-of-doors type of girl and have been searching for a perfume for those healthy, vigorous hours in the open, this perfume will be an index of your type.

To learn the name of this exhilarating perfume for the sportswoman, telephone Miss Shelby, Liberty 4900, or write to her at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for a personal reply.

Mrs. Beeckman on Manners

By MRS. BEECKMAN
THEATER ETIQUETTE

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. There is one thing I cannot get straight and that is etiquette in the theater. Is this the correct thing? Upon entering the theater, the girl precedes the young man and when leaving the young man precedes the girl?

2. I would also like to know what kind of gift is appropriate when the announcement just says "Wedding Shower."

W.

1. As the woman and man approach the ticket taker, the man steps back for the girl and he precede him. She enters that outer door first, as he shows the ticket. He gives the stub to the usher.

Then he may do one of two things: either indicate that he wishes to have the woman follow the usher, he following the girl; or he may think that he can be of more service if he follows the usher, sees that the right seats are assigned, and then stands at the head of the row, to help the woman into the row.

It is the man who chooses the procedure he prefers and the woman must wait for the cue as to which he does prefer.

I'm definitely inclined to think that the latter form is more helpful, just as I think it is more helpful in a restaurant for a man to follow the headwaiter, to see that the chosen table is assigned. It's more "masterful."

2—I should judge that just "Wedding Shower" on the invitation would mean a miscellaneous shower.

BIRTHDAY CORSAGE

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—When attending a girl's birthday party, should a young man take a present, and if he does, what would you suggest? I have had many friendly arguments concerning this question.

2—When entering a theater, should a woman precede a young man when attending together?

MALE READER.

1—It's a pleasant and gallant gesture for a young man to send the young lady a corsage to arrive at her home on the afternoon of the birthday party, or to take the corsage with him to the party.

Or he may send or take a box of candy, or a book, or a box of good-looking letter paper.

2—When they enter the theater the man steps aside and lets the woman enter as he presents the tickets.

After he has handed the tickets to the usher, he may either let the woman follow the usher, he following the woman, or he may prefer to go first and see that the correct seats are given and be in position to help her into the row in which their seats are located.

Either form is correct—the man must decide which he prefers, which he thinks more helpful.

If You Can't Be Pretty ---Be Dainty

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

I knew a very amusing girl who said, "I'm not pretty, but I can at least be clean and polite," and I have never forgotten this.

It is given to so few to be charming, talented, beautiful, but there is a lesser but very definite allure in perfect cleanliness, daintiness, within the reach of every one.

The charm of fluffy, shining, well-washed hair, of fresh glowing skin, of snowy collars, well-pressed gowns, all these can be achieved if you will only take the trouble.

Also, a very little trouble will ensure politeness, by which I mean, thoughtfulness and consideration. Do as you would be done by" will help you in this.

Do give these two simple rules a chance and see if they have not much to do, if not with loving, at least with liking. Everything has to have a beginning, and liking and respect are very good foundations for the castle of courtship and love.

* * *

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

At 16 I was allowed to go to my first party, and I met the grandest young man, who liked me right off. He made a date with me for the next day, and I couldn't eat or sleep I was so afraid mother wouldn't let me keep it. She did, after lots of argument.

Then he made a date to take me to the movies for the following week, but both Mother and Dad refused, and I cried for two nights and one day. They finally gave in, but said it was positively the last date I could have. So when he offered another date I had to turn him down.

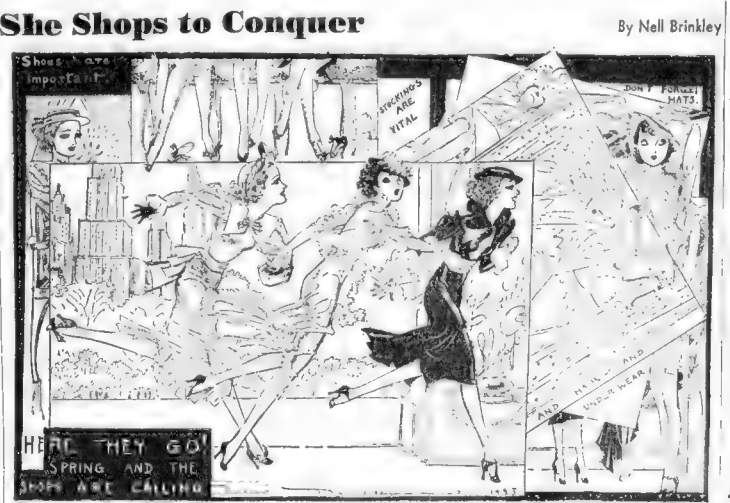
I just stay home and study and bake my books. I am going to graduate this June, and I don't intend to go to college. How can I make Mother and Dad let me have a little more liberty?

DISCONTENTED.

After you graduate from high school in June I'm sure Mother and Dad will let you go out a little oftener. They think, very probably, that it will be impossible for you to have many dates and keep up with your work in high school, and there is some truth in this, my dear. Please try and content yourself till you graduate.

She Shops to Conquer

By Nell Brinkley



EVERY pretty girl knows the good shops. Where the shape of an ankle is enhanced, where the size of a foot, be it a wearer of flat heels or stilts, is made beautiful, where hair is burnished, a waist made snug, a head ravishingly chapeaued, where the entire young lady, with the exception of her character, is equipped for conquering.

Don't tell me that women dress for women. They may have a momentary pleasure from impressing a sister, but WOMAN dresses for MAN. Or A Man. And hopes the rest of the world may be pleased on the side!

And most of all, when she is in love! The big store sells its millions of dollars' worth of femininities because Jill happens to LOVE her husband, Jack. Because she, having him overcome, wants to keep him that way. And if cocky bonnets are sold along with sober ones, showy frocks along with quiet ones, it is because husbands and sweethearts vary widely in their tastes.

Spring is here, and the pretty girl shops either to conquer, or to hold her dominion already won.

NELL BRINKLEY.

Keeping Them From Discoloring

By MARTHA LEE

Fresh from the testing kitchens of the United Fruit Company comes the news of how to keep bananas from discoloring, once they've been cut or sliced. It's easy —as easy as peeling a banana itself!

All you have to do is use fruit juice—sprinkle it on, dip the bananas in or hold them in its wake. Use grapefruit juice, canned or fresh; use canned pineapple juice, orange juice, or lemon juice. The kind you will use depends largely on what you have handy—or what fruit you plan to combine with the bananas. Lemon juice has been used for the purpose for some time, but the other juices are news.

FOR LEFTOVERS

Not content with preventing discoloration the inventors have gone a step farther and discovered that they can restore the color and firmness of cut bananas which have already darkened somewhat or become a little sticky from being allowed to stand. For this magic process you may use either canned or fresh grapefruit juice, or canned pineapple juice. Immerse the fruit in the juices until they have recovered!

This little trick is a most important factor in using up leftovers for it means that no leftover bananas need ever be thrown away.

For bananas, with their valuable vitamines and energy values, are a newly appreciated food staple nowadays, but remain the same low price at your favorite grocers.

Do you know how to buy bananas? The best way is to buy them by the "hand" or cluster. Bought in this way the germ-proof skin in which Nature wrapped the bananas will not be torn or injured; you can sometimes get a better bargain; and—best of all—you will have a supply at hand ripening as they should, which is at room temperature.

Know how to tell when bananas are ripe? Nature has provided a color signal. When part ally ripe they are yellow with green tips, and should be served cooked, as a vegetable or meat accompaniment. When all yellow and no green can be seen they can be used as either fruit or vegetable, and are excellent to use in fruit salads, cakes and the like. When the golden skin is flecked with brown, the banana is fully ripe, and is just right for eating out of hand, for then it is thoroughly and easily digestible.

BANANA TEA CAKE

- ¼ cup butter
- ½ cup sugar
- 1 egg
- 4 teaspoons baking powder
- 2 cups flour
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1 cup milk
- 1½ thinly sliced bananas
- ½ cup sugar
- 2 teaspoons cinnamon

Cream the butter and add the sugar and well beaten egg. Sift the baking powder with the flour and salt. Add to the first mixture, alternating with the milk, then fold in bananas. Pour mixture into two greased pie pans, sprinkle with mixed sugar and cinnamon, and bake 20 minutes in moderately hot oven, 400 deg. F.

BANANA-CARAMEL CUSTARD

- ½ cup sugar
- 2 cups scalded milk
- 2 tablespoons flour
- 2 egg yolks
- ¼ teaspoon vanilla
- 3 to 4 sliced bananas
- 12 to 20 marshmallows

Put sugar in frying pan and stir constantly over a low fire until melted. Add this (caramel) to scalded milk, stir until dissolved, then add to flour mixed with beaten egg yolks and paste in double boiler. Cook about 15 minutes, stirring constantly until mixture thickens. Add vanilla and pour over sliced bananas in baking dish. Cover with whipped cream, marshmallows or meringue and brown in moderate oven, 350 deg. F. For vanilla custard use sugar plain instead of caramel and add one teaspoon vanilla. Serves six

Marketing With Martha

THE OLD PROVERB says, "There's nothing new under the sun," but we always have new interests and new enthusiasms. At this time, every one is talking of calavos—the new fruit for smart salads, sandwiches, etc. Grown in California, this fruit picked for quality is now available in this part of the country at inexpensive prices—around 2 for 25c. A demonstration of it and its many uses is going on at a near-by store. We know that you will want to stop in and learn the way to serve it, to add interest to the daily meals and Spring parties,

WHAT FOOD is it that swells four times its original quantity in cooking? That can be used as cereal for breakfast, a vegetable for dinner or dessert for supper? That combines with meat, fruit and vegetable, equally well? Why, rice, of course! There's a delightful and practical new Cook Book that gives 200 ways to serve this economical food, with suggestions for menus and table setting. This book is available at no cost to you, by simply mailing a card, which we will be glad to furnish on request.

WHILE WE DO not feel qualified to say exactly what foods men like because this varies with the individual, we have gathered some recipes which we guarantee will tickle the palate of the majority of them. Included in this sheet is the latest in pie lore—a Cinnamon Apple Pie, delicate pink in color and perfectly seasoned with spice. Also a recipe for Brownies made with black walnuts and iced with a fudge frosting. A sandwich of green peppers sauted in olive oil and scrambled with eggs, is hearty and tasty enough for any he-man's party. We shall be happy to send you a copy of this lesson sheet, if you will send a 3c stamp.

THERE ARE MANY good values in fish because of the Lenten season. Take advantage of them for future use. One very attractive offer is 5 tins of shrimp for 25. These tins are 5½ oz., containing a little more than one cup of the shell fish. Plump and meaty, they can be used to make salads, sandwiches, casserole dishes, not only at this time but throughout the Spring and Summer. The label suggests seven recipes. Makes another good item for the emergency shelf.

A LARGE ONE-POUND jar of apple jelly is an item of interest from a near-by food shop. This jelly is made in Somerville, by a manufacturer of vinegar as part of the Industry. It is made of the very best apples that are available in this part of the country. Sells at 2 jars for 29c. Did you ever try making delicious pastel colored sauce by whipping one egg white with one-half cup of jelly? Simple and inexpensive.

A LITTLE GRENADINE goes a long way, but it is a necessity in most homes for flavoring and coloring purposes. There is now a new size bottle on the market, selling for 10c, containing 4 ounces.

A STREAM LINE model of electric iron is on the market. It is fully automatic, which makes for safety. Has three heats to keep the iron at a desired temperature. Comes equipped with thumb rest and button molder, of chromium plate. The handle is air cooled; that is, it is so constructed that the air can circulate and keep the handle from getting uncomfortable while using it. The iron weighs 3½ pounds—not too heavy for using and yet heavy enough to have the desired effect. Sells at $8.95.

IT IS NO LONGER necessary to go for ice trays that stick with a hammer and pick, for the new slip grids fit into any size ice compartment and keep the trays from sticking to the bottom of the unit. A little gadget that sets under the tray and helps to prolong the life of the refrigerator and saves on repairs. Two for 35c.

A NEAR-BY FOOD SHOP carries egg noodles only during the Lenten season because of the large demand for them. This shop is well stocked on all types of egg noodles—fine, medium and wide—as tastes differ in this respect. Two 12-oz. packages sell for 29c. Healthful and nutritious. Excellent substitute around which to build the meatless meal.

IF YOU ARE SENDING birthday greetings to a friend this month, you might want to say it with a novel card that gives a monthly horoscope, with birthday stone and flower. These lovely cards sell for 45c each and are quite different. Any one would enjoy receiving one, as we are always interested in our fortunes, even in a mild way.

SEND ALONG THIS COLUMN, clipped and checked, with your name and address, and loose 3c stamp for information on any of the above items. Or, telephone Martha Lee, at LIBerty 4000.

Faithfully yours,

DEBUTANTE SPRINGS BIG SURPRISE

DINNER with the girl of his dreams —but he wasn't happy.

"You would never live on my salary, honey. I couldn't afford even a cheap cook for you, let alone a genuine one who could turn out a steak like this!"

She laughed. "It's the cook's day off. I cooked this steak myself. It's a special recipe that I got from the chef of the Hotel New Yorker after lunching there some weeks ago. I've been collecting recipes since."

Jacques Gaeli, chef of the Hotel New Yorker, smiles. "I've given more than one prospective bride that recipe. It is so good, so simple. Just spread your steak generously with Colden's Prepared Mustard before broiling. It adds so much to the flavor. But use Colden's, mind you, for perfect results" (the secret is in Colden's expert blend of choicest mustard seeds and pure spices).

Suspicion of Trouble Grips Madge

CHAPTER 296

I scourged my mean jealousy with an unsparing hand as I vainly tried to soothe my screaming baby daughter.

"I shouldn't have picked her up. I said despondently to Lillian, as she appeared in the doorway triumphantly in the arms of the beautiful [illegible] "I'm practically a stranger to her, you know. Kathleen probably could quiet her, but I can't."

Do you remember [illegible] before your bath birthday?" Lillian asked, with apparent irrelevance, as she put the bottle up on the table and drew a low chair near the electric heater.

"Of course," I answered. Why?"

"Oh! nothing important," she retorted airily. "I was just wondering which particular cousin or uncle it was that dropped you on your head. Didn't you ever hear any of the family say?"

I laughed in spite of myself.

A MODERN BABY

"Probably more than one! I told her, "I couldn't possibly escape doom already, yet in Kathie's parlance, from just one dent on my skull from hitting the floor. But—Junior used to quiet down at once when he was picked up."

"Faith's the modern solution," Lillian said with a grin, exceedingly material. She scorns caresses—anything, in fact, but grub. My thrice-talented grandmother, listen to that kid yell. Look here! It's four minutes until her feeding time and he'll come would stick it out, but what say you?"

DAFOE 'Father' to QUINS

FINDS JOY IN DAILY TASK

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
International News Service Staff Correspondent

(Copyright, 1935, by International News Service.)

Callander, Ont., March 19—More like a father than a doctor was Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe as he paid his daily visit to the famous Dionne quintuplets—Yvonne, Annette, Emilie, Cecile and Marie, born last May 28th.

The doctor put out his pipe as he entered the spic and span "Dafoe Hospital for the Quintuplets" and, after disposing of some packages that were gifts for the babies, donned a white linen smock.

Dr. Dafoe stood there for a minute peering through the glass windows into the nursery room at the babies—a short, heavy set man, furrowed face and twinkling eyes.

There in the nursery were the "quints" in their beds lying on their backs and their tummies. Their eyes lighted with recognition as they saw the doctor as he suddenly made his appearance. They kicked and cavorted vigorously.

Hello Baby

The babies' room was bright and decorated with pink, yellow and green blending harmoniously and a flood of sunlight coming through the large windows. Pink beds with medals and a tiny replica of our Saviour on the cross pinned to the top of each bed. (The quintuplets were baptized Catholics), also in the room were five little chairs with round holes in the seats of each of them. Two were green and the rest were white. Over in a corner were five chamber. A closet nearby was filled with towels and other paraphernalia.

Entering the nursery room Dr. Dafoe cracked Cecile's knee in play and said:

"Hello, baby!"

He rose lighted up and he recognized [illegible] on her tummy. She pulled at the doctor's spectacles and almost got them off.

"How are you, Annette?" he said, turning to another bed.

3 Hours in Sun

Three nurses in white [illegible] of the chief nurse Miss [illegible] Kerilina, a veteran [illegible] service, came [illegible] the babies in the bassinets and put pink-knitted bonnets on the infants' heads.

Dr. Dafoe later consulted Miss De Kerilina about the babies' weights, feeding and general condition. Two of the babies had gained about two ounces, the other three had lost about an ounce each. But they were all getting along fine. Yvonne, weighing 15 pounds 12 ounces, was the heaviest. Next Marie, weighing 15 pounds 7 ounces, and Thereafter [illegible] was the lightest. [illegible] however, had been [illegible] steadily.

The personnel of the hospital consists of five nurses, [illegible] of Dr. Dafoe. Miss [illegible] in charge. The other two nurses are Yvonne Leroux and Pat Mullin, the [illegible] cook. The housekeeper is Lillian [illegible] and the orderly is Telesphore Demers.

Emerging from the nursery Dr. Dafoe found [illegible] One of the gifts was a [illegible] "A Doctor of the Body" by Ian MacLaren. [illegible] little dresses for the babies. Another box contained baby caps. They came from Jane Halleran [illegible] and Avenue, Long Island City, N. Y. A music publisher of songs sent a copy of a song entitled "Quints of Baby, all about the quints' toes.

"All fine healthy babies," replied Dr. Dafoe [illegible] to questions by the Dionne quintuplets.

(Tomorrow: Mr. Kilgallen will tell of visiting the Dionne home where the quintuplets were born and of his contact with the father and mother of the famous babies.)

TEDESCO Club Cottages SWEPT BY FIRE

For the fourth time in less than five years fire raged through the property of the Tedesco Country Club at Swampscott today causing damage estimated at $30,000.

This time the blaze was confined to two cottages, and the clubhouse itself, but 100 yards away, escaped. In 1932 the club burned with a loss of $130,000.

As in two of the three previous fires, police suspected incendiarism and both Swampscott police and fire department began an investigation.

Salem and Marblehead firemen were called to aid the Swampscott forces today as the flames spread toward a third cottage and flying brands landed on the clubhouse roof.

Sissy Role Irks Maurice

Chevalier Demands 'Something Different'

MAURICE CHEVALIER

By Associated Press

Chicago, March 19 — Maurice Chevalier says he is through with "sissy" roles.

Stopping off en route to Cannes, France, he said he intended to sun himself there until a moving picture producer decided to give him "the kind of a part I want."

He said the producers had wanted him to "laugh, kid and play all the time," while he wanted to "do something different."

$1.50 TAX BOOST Brookline Threat

Threatened with a $1.50 jump in the tax rate, the Brookline board of selectmen will seek a reduction in the town's proposed $3,030,042 budget.

The increase in taxes is attributed to higher county taxes, a decrease of $35,000 in bank taxes, and a $2,000,000 loss in property valuation.

FIVE MILES OUT on the Tampa turnpike lies St. Petersburg's dog track, set in the middle of nature's rubbish lands where scrub pines push their broomstick handles above the white-washed fence and 2000 folk, in a gray drizzle of summery colors, wager handfuls of confetti money on the hazy hazards of the greyhounds' legs.

Austen Lake

The scene is the same as a miniature horse track, with the fresh, country club atmosphere, terraced slopes and an elaborate clubhouse where gorgeous ladies sprawl, showing improper lengths of satin shanks and straining and twisting in body English-antics to help their money dogs home.

It is a rather pretentious, stagey show, in which 10 blue-uniformed footmen lead the slinky dogs, muzzled and blanketed, in a quick-time parade while the band plays.

The hounds, with a ripple of lean muscle under their sausage skins, are in a hysterical state as the flunkies stuff them into the narrow hutches of the starting box.

There are slender bars on the trap doors of each cell, where the dogs may see their handlers run down the track, and in the breathless moment before the white, mechanical rabbit starts its jerky, imitation lope from the opposite side of the saucer, the air is filled with frantic squeals.

* * *

A Life of Frustration

I AM ASSURED BY THE HANDLERS that the dogs enjoy this hugely. Though, I suspect if this is so, it is because this is the only fun the weasel pups have out of living, which at other times consists of life on a leash and an everlasting jail sentence behind wire gratings.

Now, as the mechanical rabbit, which is not scented with blood and no more alive than any taxidermist's model, gathers headway and flashes past the starting box, a man jerks down the level which springs the traps, and the dogs shoot away in a pell-mell rush after the fleeing dummy.

An official in a half-sunken control post in the center of the infield controls the speed of the electric bunny from a gadget like a street car motorman's lever, skillfully keeping the decoy 20 feet ahead of the leading dog.

At a far end of the oval, 50 yards beyond the finish line, a canvas curtain is pulled across the stretch, so that the dogs, once having passed the judge's stand, will charge into the fabric wall and be gathered up by the handlers.

It is a nightly round-of thwarting for the hounds, whose intelligence is dimmed down to the stage where they never discover the fraud of chasing a quarry which always, at the last moment, ducks behind a screen.

Florida Fun Money

HERE IN FLORIDA, the last American geographical frontier where pleasure is the principal industry and the tropic climate breeds a spendthrift lunacy, a dog track does not seem such a sinister gambling device as it would in Massachusetts.

This is because the betting customers are from our Northern dollar nobility, who can afford to spend high prices for spine chills, heart flutter and mental giddiness.

If they are soaked up by the dogs, it is only spare, or fun money anyway, which can be refreshed by writing another draft on their home bank.

It was at this St. Petersburg track that Judge Emil Fuchs, as owner of the Braves, gathered his first impression of dog racing as a form of innocent merriment suitable to be introduced to his pious home community.

Having sprinkled his own dollars through the wickets and feeling no blush of remorse, he assumed that dog racing was an elfin frolic and a painless method of parting opulent people from careless dollars.

Boston folk, unlike Florida folk, are not attending to their winter's spending and are not busy having a year's excitement in a few weeks' time within regions where the law is frankly abandoned in consideration of paying guests.

Instead of spare or fun money, the cash that runs through Boston race-wringers too often represents the rent and grocery money.

* * *

Render Unto Florida the Things That Are Florida's

I CONFESS, AFTER A SURVEY of the St. Pete Kennel Club, I am convinced that dog racing can be conducted with a minimum of chizzelry, mooching and thievery.

The dogs are impounded in the Jinny-pit two hours before race time, under a state veterinary, who checks them for drugs, overfeeding, sand-papered paws, tied toes and other varieties of chicanery.

Here, at least, during training races, no freshly slaughtered or live rabbits are used to heighten the savagery of apprentice pups.

Yet the business is peculiarly adapted to the giddy, gaudy, goofishness of a sensation-crazed locality where nerve-jaded Northerners come to pay fancy prices for emotional tension.

It is logical in Florida, where sanity is usually a jarring note in the illusion and where people can afford to walk in a dream.

But for a working population, which cannot afford to drink gin-swiggles for breakfast or loaf sun-time away in slacks, dog racing would turn into a community headache and make sober citizenry very hiveish in no time at all.

IRISH LAD'S 19TH IN ROW

By Jack Conway

New York, March 19—Danno O'Mahoney is today the toast of Broadway as a result of his startling victory over Jim Browning, former world champion, in their wrestling battle before a crowd of 12,000 persons in the New York Garden.

The 22-year-old Irish champion used his famous "Irish Whip" to pin Browning in 22 minutes, 31 seconds. Browning lasted longer with O'Mahoney than anybody who has ever opposed the sensational Celt.

Danno's win was his 19th straight since coming to America and his 37th straight since he began wrestling as a professional.

The crowd in the Garden went frantic with excitement as O'Mahoney cut loose in the closing stages of the tussle and wrecked Browning and his turn over body scissors with his "Irish whip."

FLOORS JIM

Browning tried to beat O'Mahoney down with rough tactics in the early stages of the contest. He beat Danno back with blows to the head and face.

The Irish champion insisted upon wrestling rather than fighting and dropped Browning to the canvas with an arm lock. He then punished Jim with a body scissors.

Twice Browning tried to pin Danno with his turn over body scissors hold. O'Mahoney was able to wiggle out of the hold as he was being turned in the air.

O'Mahoney used headlocks and body holds to punish Browning. The latter then resumed his two-fisted attack.

WHIP WORKS

Browning went back to his turn over body scissors. Instead of trying to wiggle away from this hold Danno surprised Browning by countering with a toe hold. Danno applied such terrific pressure that Browning limped when he got clear of the hold.

Danno continued to set a fast pace, and didn't give Browning an opportunity to rest. He finally gripped Browning's right hand with his powerful hand and started the "Irish Whip." Danno lost his grip and Browning went crashing against the ropes.

O'Mahoney tried for the "Irish Whip" again, but once more his hand slipped and Browning got away from him.

O'Mahoney wasn't the least bit discouraged, crowded to close quarters and once more applied the "Irish Whip."

This time Browning couldn't get away from him. Twice Danno whipped Browning across the ring, then crashed him over his shoulder to the canvas where he pinned him.

Danno in Tourney

New York, March 19—Jack Mac[illegible], manager of Dan O'Mahoney, announced today that he proposed to enter the Irish champion in the international heavyweight tournament which opens in Los Angeles, April 24, under the direction of Lou Daro.

The California Athletic Commission will recognize the survivor of the tournament as world champion.

WOMEN Pin Aces MEET

SOUTH STATION IS SCENE

By Ed Cogswell

After a lot of pulling and haulings it was finally decided today to hold a 20-string match between Florence "Bobby" Anderson, the crack woman bowler, and Ruth Weckbacker, the Fitchburg school teacher, the first 10 strings to be rolled tomorrow evening at the South Station Alleys.

This match has been on the string for the past month, but one obstacle after another has prevented the two settling details of the candlepin encounter. Even now it is not fully decided where the final 10 strings will be bowled.

Miss Anderson has been one of the foremost women bowlers of Greater Boston for the past three years while Miss Weckbacker has come into prominence through her weekly league bowling this season at the Hub Recreation Club.

Each are confident, if not even in advance, have plenty of confidence in Bobby Anderson their own game, and are thus figured to give the fans plenty of excitement right up to bowling the last box.

Experts, who have seen both stars perform, believe the women's ten string record of 1678 will be shattered.

In order that the women bowling fans may see the contest, Manager Bill Winch states there will be no admission fee for them and that all can be accommodated. Men being allotted the standing space.

A chance has been made in the management of the duckpin team going to Washington, D. C., on April 6, Joe Gray having given way to Red Millar, the Revere and Lynn bowling promoter.

Millar will have complete control of the men, both on the trip and in the National Duckpin tournament. The team will bowl in the event under the name of Boston All-Stars.

On schedule for tonight are the following league matches: Employes' Liability at 20th Century, R. E. Businessman's at Arlington Sq., Waldorf and 1st National Bank at Huntington Club, Roxbury Businessmen's (1st Div.) at Eagle, Mystic Valley at Circuit alleys, Liberty Mutual at Clarendon and at Shawsheen's R. H. White, United Shoe Machinery and N. E. Mutual (women).

Braves Drive Steps Up

The halfway mark in the $75,000 drive by the citizens committee of the Boston Braves has been reached, it was reported at the weekly meeting of the committee at the Copley Plaza.

With another month to go and the demand for ticket books, which include a reserved seat for opening day, increasing daily, the committee was looking forward to passing the mark they set early in the year.

Tigers will meet the Brooklyn Dodgers today at Orlando.

Each team has won two starts in the Grapefruit League. Cochrane, who was incapacitated for the Philly and Reds games by a cut finger, will do the catching and will resume his old position as second in the batting order.

Lee collaborated with Pitcher Clint Brown Saturday in a one-hit victory over the New Orleans Pelicans (Catcher Bill Brenzel was moved to comment after the game that he didn't "see how anybody can keep that fellow Lee from winning 15 or 20 games" this year.

Sacramento, Calif.—Rookie pitchers in the Chicago Cub camp can never complain about not getting a fair chance this year.

A succession of ills and injuries has kept the hurling staff so crippled that Manager Charlie Grimm has been forced to turn to his rookies for the many exhibition games. Bill Lee and Tex Carleton were on the "sick list" today.

Bruins Meet Maroons

Montreal's Maroons, Stanley cup conscious, advance on Boston Garden for tonight's tussle with the Boston Bruins, American champions.

A near capacity house is expected to sit in as the regular playing season comes to an end.

The fight and the color of the Maroons and the assurance that tonight's fans will have first call on playoff tickets will be the lure.

The Bruins open the National League championship series with Toronto Maple Leafs at the Garden on Saturday night. The Maroons meet the Chicago Blackhawks in a second place playoff series opening

N. Y. U. Five Turns PRO

PLAYS HERE MONDAY

By Bob Ahearn

It used to be for dear ol' N. Y. U. that the varsity basketball quintet sank baskets—but now it's for the dear old dore-mi.

New York University, considered the class of college teams in the East this season, are now playing exhibition games, hoping the attendance will continue on the high plane set during the recently completed collegiate schedule.

All five members of the team would be employed by a considerable number of the 99,950 fans who paid to see Ned Irish's six hoop bills at Madison Square Garden, will display their wares at the Arena next Monday night against the Malden City Club.

Capt. Sid Gross, Leonard Maidman, Rubinstein, Klein, Terjeson, and Schulman all will be seen in action against the City Club hoopsters.

The Malden five has compiled an enviable record in local competition, losing [illegible] House twice, Roxbury Y. M. H. A., Whittier Club, [illegible] Club and [illegible] Y. M. H. A. shoot[illegible] Gotham by plenty of [illegible]

In the other five of the Arena [illegible] New York, Brooklyn, [illegible] and Long Island champions, will square off against the pick of the American Pro League players, selected by President John J. O'Brien.

Mike Begovich, New York Jewels; Lou Spindell and Capt. Honey Russell, New Britain; Carl Johnson, Utica, and Cliff Anderson and Moe Frankel, Jersey City, and Shikey Gotthoffer, Philadelphia Hebrews, will disport for the All-Stars.

Many of amateur fives interested in entering the 12th annual tournament of the Boys' Club of Boston better get in touch with athletic director Nate Hurwitz at 15 Green st., Charlestown.

Closing day for entries is set for April 1, but as much amount of time is required in the filing of applications and the proper classification of players.

BAER-LOUIS BOUT IS 'NATURAL'

NEXT $1,000,000 "GATE"

By Damon Runyon
(Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service)

Miami, Fla., March 19—"How good is Joe Louis?"

One of the best known pugilistic observers in this country now in Miami repeated the writer's question today, and then said:

"I've seen him in several fights.

"In my opinion, he can take Primo Carnera, Max Schmeling and Art Lasky down into a cellar with five-ounce gloves on, and bring them up on his back one after the other.

"How about Baer?" the writer asked.

"It would be a great fight," was the quick answer. "It would be the slugging match of the pugilistic ages. Two terrific young hitters.

"Louis may possibly need a little more experience before meeting Baer, but I'm not so sure about that, either.

"Jim Jeffries won the championship in his eleventh professional battle, and Louis is as good a fighter now as Jeffries was then.

"Baer and Louis is the million-dollar match of the future."

The writer was marveling at this opinion from a man whose judgment he respects when announcement came from New York that Joe Louis, The Dark Dynamiter," is to appear there this coming summer under the auspices of the Twentieth Century Club.

Anyone of the new organization has secured the key man of the heavyweight situation.

A PUNCHER

Mike Jacobs, president of the Twentieth Century, which controls the Polo Grounds and the Yankee Stadium, says that Louis will meet the best opponent that can be secured, the preference being one of the so-called leading heavyweight contenders.

The fans will interest the pugilistic fans of the Atlantic seaboard who have read and heard so much of Louis that they are anxious to view him in action.

Not in many years has a heavyweight fighter come up as suddenly as Louis or aroused such widespread interest, the answer being that he is a puncher.

NO COLOR LINE

In these times, a Negro heavyweight who can really fight would have none of the handicaps of his predecessors in getting a title match, because the heavyweight title is no longer the sacred emblem that it used to be, and the old "color line" could hardly be invoked by a fighting white gladiator.

As a matter of fact, money is so scarce among the fighting gentry that they are eager to accept battle with Louis because he can draw in the customers.

He has more offers than his manager, John Roxborough, can consider, and they come from all parts of the country.

The answer again is he is a puncher. The pugilistic customers are tired of seeing fighters who cannot dent a derby hat with their blows.

The scientific phases of the manly art of scrambling ears are all right in theory, but the customers will not pay to see the scientists.

Hiker Joy Returns

Joy has turned out winning teams here for the last two seasons, and took the Little Three championship last year.

Before coming to Canisius, Joy for 14 years was assistant to the late Major Cavanaugh at Boston College and Fordham.

THE REAL McCOY

Mr. Boston Maxes to Meet In June

By Jack Conway

New York, March 19.

SPEAKING OF NEWS: Max Baer, according to Jimmy Johnston, has signed a treaty of peace with the New York Garden. He has agreed to Max Schmeling as an opponent for a title defense bout in June.

The match will not be officially announced until late in April as Johnston wishes to keep up the interest in the Lasky - Braddock bout and other heavy weight promotions.

The winners of these various contests are supposed to be considered as challengers for Max Baer. Maybe in 1936, but the man of the hour is Schmeling.

The German will remain in Berlin until May when he will sail to this country. Schmeling has always been a patient waiter.

Once he has been the logical boxer for an important match, he has never jeopardized his position by engaging in a minor contest that might possibly bring him grief.

• • •

Walter Friedman, manager of Jack Doyle, Irish heavyweight, tells me he is at odds with Primo Carnera. Friedman originally got Leon See to bring Carnera to America. Friedman says his interest in the Carnera management has been absorbed by Billy Duffy

• • •

The $14,000 gate at the Carnera-Impelletiere bout proved the public is heavyweight minded. When Schmeling knocked out Steve Hamas he removed both Hamas and Carnera as title challengers.

LITTLE WOLF

TOOTS MONDT tells me that Chief Little Wolf, who threw Rudy Dusek in the Garden last night, is the best of the new crop of heavyweights. Mondt declares Chief Little Wolf will be the next champion.

He left New York by plane for Los Angeles at 11 p. m. last night and was due for a happy landing at 4 p. m. today. He clashes with Gus Sonnenberg at a Lou Daro show in Los Angeles tomorrow night.

• • •

Dan O'Mahoney and Jack McGrath, his manager, left for Chicago today. The Irish champion will battle Gino Garibaldi in the Windy City next Monday night, while on the following evening he will have Rudy Dusek as an opponent in St. Louis.

• • •

Ed Don George does not appear interested in George Zaharas' challenge. The latter insists he is entitled to a return contest with the champion, and believes he will lift the title if given a fair break by the referee.

• • •

JAKE ON SPOT

NEW YORK baseball fans are bitter against Col. Jake Ruppert for letting Babe Ruth go to the Braves. The showing of the Yankees against the Braves in the games at St. Petersburg hasn't tended to eliminate any of this ill will.

Ruth's New York following threaten to become National Leaguers, and root for Bill Terry's Giants. Many of these same fans deserted the Giants when Jawn McGraw was replaced by Terry.

Terry has been told by the Giants' front office to take advantage of this situation, and to be particularly careful in his relations with the press.

Terry has had a pet hate against all but a few sportspersons. The new order calls for a large smile and a firm handshake every time Terry meets one of the gentlemen or ladies of the press.

JIMMY JOHNSON is much interested in the recent ring success of Al McCoy. He says McCoy proved he is one of the best of the middleweights when he stopped Tait Littleman. Johnston says McCoy can have a Garden date if he beats Bob Godwin at the Boston Garden on Friday night.

Rip Valenti does not intend to permit the colorful McCoy to get away from Boston and will sign him to clash with Lou Brouillard if he upsets Godwin.

Brouillard has had a run of victories in California rings, and will be back in Boston early in April looking for new fields to conquer.

Story Lives But Winner Goes on Last Adventure

By FLOYD GIBBONS

FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO EVERYBODY:

The Adventurers Club flag is at half mast today, boys and girls. It flies that way for William Cotter, of 111½ Eighth avenue, Newark, N. J., whose story I am printing today. Bill won't read it though—that is with human eyes—because, you see, when Bill was notified of his election to the club a letter came back from his sorrowing mother, Mrs. Winifred Cotter, saying that Bill had gone on the Greatest Adventure of all—Death!

But Death can't keep you out of the Club, Bill, and it can't stop your story. Here she goes, Old Man.

Bill was a railroad man back in '18—in the days of the World War—when "the gods who ruled the shining steel rails" trained women to take the places of the men who had rushed off to join the forces. Bill's story is about one of these women who ruled the hearts of the train crews.

"Her name was Louise," Bill wrote me. "We called her 'Louie,' and nobody knew her last name, but she was a telegraph operator and came from Whitehall. She was a very swell kid, around five feet tall, blonde hair and about twenty.

"Louie held down an assignment in the goofiest station on the whole system. It was at a place called 'Kellys,' six miles west of Schenectady, in the Heidelberg Mountains. Why there was a station there nobody knew, because there wasn't a house within cannon shot of the blue, mouldy station shack, and it was so deserted that Louie had to move in bag and baggage and keep house for herself in what used to serve as a waiting room in the old horse and buggy days."

"And it was a forlorn spot for a girl all alone," Bill says. "Only one train a week stopped there, but all trains would have stopped if the train crews could have had their way. But not being able to stop anyway passed her front door the boys used to drop off newspapers, magazines and candy and hang out of the trains like a bunch of schoolboys waiting for the smile that Louie would give them.

"The boys performers of caboose as passing her shack were crowd[ed] to the rear platforms to see the [illegible] and every one [illegible] took a look at Louie [illegible] minute. Whether was there to get a fleeting glimpse of the pretty operator of the [illegible]

All of which proves that Louie was somewhat of a favorite, and yet, on the night when she needed help the most—the night when a mission crept up softly behind her in her lonely post—not one of her silent admirers were within ten miles of her.

Bill's crew was up at the Delanson Coal Pocket, at the top of the mountain, office, ready to drop down to Schenectady with a sort, fast-car train load of coal, when they heard the news. The conductor came tearing down the steps of the watch tower—giving the signal to start as he ran—and swung onto the caboose steps. His face was pale, [illegible] she was screaming, but he understood her to say that a partition was breaking into the station room, he heard a crash like the [illegible] breaking glass, and the phone went dead.

Well, sir, Bill says, he and that gang in the caboose went crazy. It was only a fifteen minute run to Kellys, but they all knew that anything might happen in fifteen minutes. Swift, the flagman, paced the caboose floor like a caged animal. He wanted to cut off the engine and leave the cars, but the crew all knew it would take longer to do that.

Bill says that short run was the longest he ever made. The minutes dragged along like hours. He cursed the engineer for not going faster, but the engineer didn't know anything about what was happening to Louie—if he did they might be all piled up by now along the right of way, because the engineer was especially fond of her.

Finally, Bill says, the train pulled into the last stretch of road before Kellys. The [illegible] rushed up pick her lips, [illegible] anything handy and [illegible] the conductor pulled the emergency valve.

Zowie! The heavy train, so long and grinding under the air brakes, slid to a shrieking stop. The caboose was almost up to the station. The crew piled off as one man and rushed to the attack. They slowed down a little, Bill says, when they saw some one weaving a [illegible] lantern on the seldom used platform.

"Yes," Bill says, "it was Louie waving the lantern—her blonde hair mussed up a little and [illegible] scratches on her pretty face, but all in all, the [illegible] as if no one [illegible] except [illegible] a bearded agent [illegible] had been held firmly under the arm of a broken [illegible]

The [illegible] crew [illegible] world as Louie told her [illegible] says her [illegible] [illegible] at the end of her. She [illegible] reading, she [illegible] [illegible] before when she [illegible], but the [illegible] was watching her.

Nobody ever passed the little station on foot, she knew—at least nobody had, and [illegible] was there, but [illegible] persisted and [illegible] her. She looked [illegible] and could not hold back a scream of terror.

Frightened though she was she quickly reached for the phone and shouted out the news that the convict man had heard. Before she had finished the intruder smashed the glass and, reaching in the window, snatched the phone from her hand. Her scream came over the wire and the phone went dead. But [illegible] phone cord had not been ripped from the wall the tower man would have heard even more startling sounds.

He would have heard the sound of a heavy frying pan bouncing off a human head and then the crash of a window sash on a rough human neck as the "helpless little blonde" captured single handed a man twice her size—a man, incidentally, who turned out to be an escaped lunatic.

And that is Bill's story, boys and girls—the story he sent before he went on his Last Adventure. I wish he could send us another one—one about this new adventure of his. Don't you? But I'm afraid it's one that we will all have to learn about ourselves.

But, anyway, Bill, I'll be sending YOUR ten-dollar check along to your mother, and until then, GOOD ADVENTURE!

Ina Claire Triumphs

"Ode to Liberty" at Plymouth

Walter Slezak Also Shares in Premiere's Laurels

By HARRIS MORGAN

In a merry major key, "Ode to Liberty" brought the completely captivating Miss Ina Claire to the stage of the Plymouth Theater last evening.

Adapted by Sidney Howard from Michel Duran's French, there's a delightful Gallic flavor to the piece. Indeed there's considerably more flavor than substance, but since the setting is Paris in the spring, and Miss Claire and Walter Slezak are there to add the required dash and delicacy, that's quite as it should be.

As a tease young man talking fervently of the communist e millenium takes refuge in the flat of a charming young married woman who is seeking liberty for its salutary reasons. For his advancing cause he has taken a great fit of Hitler and missed.

Perfect days while an aroused constituency searches the roof-tops and stands guard over the premises, one extraordinary fellow expounds his naive theories to an enchanted hostess. So successful does that lady overcome her shock that when a comrade in communism, whose side line is plotting, arranges an escape, her main idea is to hold her man, in defiance of communism, conscription and an increasingly suspicious husband.

It's a diverting idea, and all it's great little possibilities have been cleverly exploited. The dangerous young radical, played by enormous heftiness, commences with a new suit and two changes of underwear (which Madeleine here him not to reward as reactionary) weakens under the capitalistic onslaught and has new comrade's charms.

At the final curtain his escape to Spain is being arranged, with an unsocialistic compromise between the son of capitalism and the sworn lamb of communism. Madeleine is buying walking shoes and a little Spanish farm, and her lover will grow grapes in the Pyrenees between revolutions.

It's been rumored about that one of these days Miss Claire would like to try her wings and talents in more serious drama. Undoubtedly her Camille would be worth watching, but it would be heresy to take away from gay and bright comedy anyone who can be so much such a combination of effervescence, intelligence and charm.

Last evening she had the added advantage of having Walter Slezak as her leading man. To play up to anyone who can take any inconsequential line and make it sparkle like the brightest gem in comedy's crown, is no mean assignment. Mr. Slezak more than measured it. And as a minor but far from mean talent, no one since Lionel Atwill has eaten a stage meal with such gusto and conviction.

Katherine Stewart's supercilious maid-servant was perfect. Roy Gordon played the banker Barnaud with the proper pomposity. Ha. h. Isaacson contributed some broad comedy as the plumber and Paul Meier made a believable and unbelieving Dorvis.

Mr. Howard set the production and the lighting to harmonize with the fantastic tone of the whole. Lee De Wolfe

Fifth Week at Copley

Tonight's performance of "The Dragon" famous and notable drama now in its fifth week of its revival at the Copley Theater will be forward by the second of the season's guests with special performances of "Dragon" in honor of the visiting players. Tonight's guest will be Miss Mary Morris, who is now playing in Philadelphia with the Theatre Guild and radio fame.

There is no added charge to guests for a dance and dinner at the Plantation Salon.

Play for Dancing at Met

Tomorrow evening the Dorsey Brothers, Tommy and Jimmy, will open a new and several weeks' run heading the bill at the Metropolitan Theatre. They appear in the Paramount Publix stage show and will play for dancing between the showings of the picture.

Tommy Dorsey and Jimmy Dorsey and their orchestra will appear on the stage for the first time in Boston. They have been appearing at the Hotel Lincoln in New York and have been broadcasting over the Columbia network.

Bob Crosby, who is said to be an adept vocalist, will be featured with the band. Bob is the younger brother of the famous Bing Crosby, screen and radio favorite.

Also featured in the stage show will be Frank Gaby, comedian, and Ray Mayer, dancer. Gaby is well known to Boston audiences, having appeared here in a number of vaudeville and musical comedy productions.

Ray Mayer is a protege of Fred Astaire and has been featured in a number of Astaire's pictures. He is also a well known dancer in Boston night clubs.

Rounding out the stage show will be Ben Bernie's Lads of Rhythm, a group of eight musicians who have been playing at the Lincoln Hotel in New York.

Also on the program will be the Ritz Brothers, Al, Jimmy and Harry, who are appearing in the picture, "Sing, Baby, Sing," which is on the screen at the Paramount Theatre.

PLEDGE Support to 'OATH'

'98 VETERANS BACK BILL

Support of the United Spanish War Veterans was thrown behind the bill advocating an oath of allegiance for teachers, in an open letter issued yesterday by John W. Ford, Massachusetts department commander of the U. S. W. V.

Ford's letter reads:

"As Department Commander of the United Spanish War Veterans I wish to state that the organization of which I have the honor to be in command, unqualifiedly endorses every line in House Bill Number 1231 now before the Committee on Education of the Great and General Court of the Commonwealth.

"This bill merely insists that the people to whom we are trusting the education of our children must be honest and pure in their allegiance to American principles.

"Why anybody, living under the principles of our country, should object to swearing allegiance to the flag of the Republic is beyond our understanding.

"The Department of Massachusetts, United Spanish War Veterans, and its affiliated bodies, stands ready and willing, at any time, to go to any lengths to further the measure in question and takes this opportunity to request its many friends, in our State Legislature, to vote and work to bring this issue to a successful conclusion.

(Signed) "John W. Ford, Department Commander."

Weather Report

For Boston and Vicinity: Occasional rain and increasing temperatures tonight and early Wednesday, followed by clearing and colder by Wednesday night; moderate to fresh southwesterly winds shifting to northwest by Wednesday night.

Massachusetts: Occasional light rain tonight and Wednesday; warmer tonight and in east portion Wednesday; somewhat colder Wednesday night.

Maine and New Hampshire: Occasional light rain tonight and Wednesday, warmer tonight and on the coast Wednesday; slightly colder in north portion Wednesday.

Rhode Island and Connecticut: Occasional light rain and more emphatic tonight and Wednesday, somewhat colder Wednesday night.

Eastern New York: Occasional light rain tonight and Wednesday; warmer except in extreme northwest portion tonight; warmer on the coast and somewhat cooler in north and central portions Wednesday.

Atlantic Coast: Southerly to partly Hook: Fresh, south and southwest winds, possibly strong at times over north portion, and overcast weather with occasional light rain tonight and Wednesday.

For Shippers: Warmer tonight; protect perishable shipments moving into northern portions of New England and New York Wednesday night from temperatures to the upper 40s.

WEATHER CONDITIONS

The barometric pressure continues high, but rather sharp low Atlantic slope. A trough of pressure slightly lower than extends from the Mexican boundary to the eastward over the Central valleys, the Lake region, and into central valley of Canada. Little precipitation has occurred except scattered light rains from the Mississippi Valley to the Middle Atlantic coast, and a few snow flurries in the central regions. There is much cloudiness, however, in eastern and southern parts of the country. The temperature has risen generally east of Minnesota and northward out the south. Freezing weather prevails this morning in the northern tier states and Canada, and sub-zero temperatures in central Manitoba.

SQUADRON NO. 107

"Louise Wheeler's Sky Girls," of Belmont, Commander, Rhea Doucette. Banner points, 390.

Four new members have been admitted. Alice Heid was appointed librarian upon receipt of the Junior Birdmen Handbook set. An individual squadron emblem was discussed. This emblem is to be in addition to the Junior Birdmen sweater emblem worn by each member.

SQUADRON NO. 599

"Bulldogs," of Cambridge, Commander, Richard Tighe. Banner points, 137.

SQUADRON NO. 313

Elections: Clifford Kinghorn, captain; James Lyman, sergeant-at-arms. After plans for a penny sale were discussed, Irene Lyman and Edie Sullivan served refreshments. Arthur Peaslee has applied for membership.

Owning his own model supply business, financed from his own savings, at the age of 14, is the record of Arthur V. Fraher, Jr., of 48 Cheshbrough road, West Roxbury, and son of Arthur V. Fraher, Sr., dispatcher in the bureau of operations at police headquarters.

Arthur V. Fraher, Jr. them to his chums and acquaintances.

Soon after developing an intense interest in aviation he decided to couple his enthusiasm with the practical side and asked his father for money to buy supplies at wholesale and sell

The father advised him to use his own savings for the purpose. Arthur did so and established the Beacon Model Aero Shop. His business has grown steadily. While Officer Fraher has encouraged his son's interest in aviation he has also insisted that home school work be done first.

INCOME Of $20,277,442 FOR CARBIDE

Union Carbide & Carbon Corp. and subsidiaries report for year ended December 31, 1934, certified by independent auditors, net income of $20,277,442 after federal taxes, depreciation, depletion, interest and subsidiary preferred dividends, equivalent to $2.25 a share on 9,007,133 shares of capital stock, including 97,605 shares held by the company.

Cash and marketable securities, at market value, were $20,119,104, against $18,321,023 on December 31, 1933.

MORSE CALLS For Cooperation

There never has been greater need for close co-operation between employer and employe, Julius C. Morse, president of the Leopold Morse Company, said at a dinner dance of the organization in the Hotel Westminster.

"It's perfectly all right to take our hats off to a glorious past," he asserted, "but, as regards the future, we must take our coats off."

Taggart Corp.

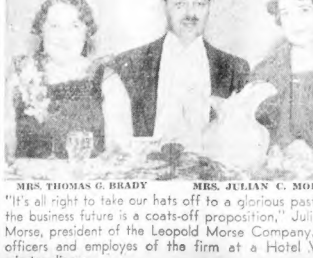
Future 'Coats-Off' Fight

LEON STRAUSS



MRS. THOMAS G. BRADY MRS. JULIAN C. MORSE

RUKEYSER

New Deal Hitting Thrifty

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

(Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service)

There is evidence that the broad class of thrifty persons of moderate means has been especially hard hit.

Julian D. Rosenberg, New York attorney, in a message to this column, states the thesis that the New Deal policies have worked greater injury to the American middle class than to any other bracket or society.

"The attacks on large corporations, particularly public utilities, have unquestionably devalued common stocks and equities in most instances. The President maintains that the bonds of these companies are not being injured by his policies.

"He argues that it is the bonds that are held by widows and orphans as well as savings banks.

"I should like to point out that the common stocks of utilities during the last decade became the typical investment of the small business man and the middle class. Normally the yield on common stocks was greater than the yield on high grade bonds.

"As a result, the man with a moderate competence was forced to place his investment in common stocks of an approved character to enjoy the higher return on a comparatively small principal.

"On the other hand, the very wealthy were able to enjoy a large income even though the yield of gold was small, by the son of the size of their principal. In fact, good common stocks were frequently spoken of as the business man's investment.

"These securities were purchased in large numbers by the middle class and in the case of utilities, distribution among consumers was stimulated by the companies themselves on a very large scale.

"The administration points out that in the case of utilities, common stocks have been viciously watered and the capital structure unduly inflated. I grant freely that this is true, the wiping out of these values will injure the innocent purchasers of stock rather than the high financiers who built up the unsound structures.

"In many cases the organizers and promoters from the outset recognized that there was little real value behind the securities which they issued, and proceeded to unload them on the public.

"As a result thereof, those who are really guilty will in most cases hardly be affected by the punitive drive of the administration."

"Now turning to the effect of direct taxation, the increase in income tax strikes relatively with the greatest force against the middle class.

"The wealthiest people in this country have kept their holdings in federal, state and municipal obligations which in view of the equile tax decisions laid down by Chief Justice Marshall over a century ago, are entirely exempt from any form of taxation.

"Moreover, the wealthy at present may still under some restrictions reorganize holding corporations to receive the income that they do not require, which corporations pay a 13½ per cent corporation tax on any earnings or income they may have, although recent attempts have been made to close up these opportunities for evasion."

BELGIUM'S GOLD ACTION DISTURBING

WORLD NEEDS STABLE MONEY

By B. C. FORBES

Belgium's dropping of the gold standard swells international uncertainty. It thickens doubts as to whether France will maintain her gold currency, the only important one left, until the United States and Britain are ready for stabilization.

Neither government expresses readiness for such action.

The recent and present era of international squabbling and jockeying to steal marches will in time give way to sanity and co-operation—exchange (currency) cooperation, foreign trade cooperation, cooperation in dealing with national misbehavers.

B. C. Forbes

Part of the world's economic woes, part of the shrinkage in international commerce, part of the unemployment in industrial countries, part of the depression in certain important industries, is due to the abnormal fluctuations and conditions in most currencies and to the almost universal raising of foreign trade barriers and restrictions. World trade has diminished even more than domestic trade.

The sooner it becomes feasible for America, for Great Britain, for France, for Germany, for Italy and other important nations to get together and restore a workable gold standard, the better will it be for mankind.

This week's gold events in Europe are likely to emphasize the unsatisfactoriness of the existing status.

But probably wrangling, maneuvering, checkmating will continue for some time.

Americans have less to fear regarding the soundness of their currency than have other nations. We have almost two dollars in gold for each dollar in circulation, a fundamental record. Moreover, we possess greater natural wealth than any other land. Our productive resources and facilities lead the world.

True, the administration's extraordinary heavy over-spending makes for inflation and consequently, uneasiness lurks in the financial, investment and business articles under the possibility of further diluting of the dollar. Such apprehensions are understandable.

Let Washington adopt a helpful attitude towards industry and there would ensue such business, investment and employment recovery that the danger of harmful inflation would quickly vanish, and even the prevailing alarm over prospective crushing taxation would substantially subside.

All the materials requisite for reviving prosperity are here, but the indispensable element of confidence is tragically lacking, due to Washington's inexplicable, short-sighted, unsettling conduct.

Despite Washington's none-too-sensible handling of its affairs, many bureaucrats and some others, including Father Coughlin, want to destroy our present banking system and hand it over to inexperienced political appointees, to be manipulated as a tail to the government's kite.

F. A. McKowne of the Hotels Statler Co. tells me that, in spite of the unfortunate experiences of the hotel industry during recent years, the Hotel Statler of St. Louis has paid off every dollar of bonds and every share of preferred stock originally subscribed by the local community. Every dollar of interest and every dividend was promptly paid all along.

"You have made a 100 p. c. record in discharging all obligations fully and promptly when practically every other large hotel organization in the country was forced into default."

"Farm real estate taxes in 1933 were the lowest per acre since 1918, and the lowest since 1929 in relation to land values."

How many of the rest of us have enjoyed, or are likely to enjoy, greatly reduced taxes?

Little is said publicly, but private information is that aircraft building is being carried both here and in foreign countries most frequently figuring in war rumors.

Hemphill Says Fight to Rule U.S. Hurts

By ROBERT H. HEMPHILL
Financial Authority

Madame Secretary of Labor Perkins believes she can run labor matters in this nation better than anyone else, according to her testimony on the pending Wagner Labor Bill in which she takes sharp issue with Francis Biddle, chairman of the National Labor Relations Board.

Madame Secretary has labored assiduously to get the President committed to a policy of regulating labor along with every other human activity and the main idea is about to backfire by creation of a permanent independent regulations body.

* * *

It now seems that the nation is not threatened with a dictator so much as with a position of dictators, each one of whom obdurately insists on personal authority which no one short of the omnipotent master of the universe could delegate.

Dissipating Gold

Mr. Wallace wants to be absolute food dictator. Mr. Richberg aspires officially to tell our industrialists how little they have learned about their business. Mr. Eccles wants a franchise to run the banking system of the country and now Madame Secretary is holding out her hand to Congress for the supreme power to tell the workers of the nation where to bend in.

None of these embryo dictators agree on any important question or policy, and beneath the surface there are constantly in progress some sweet little civil wars of which only the minor explosions are occasionally audible.

In the meantime—

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, who boasts that he knows nothing about money and finance, is dissipating our gold supply in the only way in which it could by no possibility benefit anyone except a few speculators who must have shrewdly guessed what was going to happen and sold the market short.

Eleven millions of our willing workers are idle with the number gradually increasing.

Puzzling Picture

We are importing a steadily lengthening list of food products into a country which has the developed and potential capacity to feed a quarter of the world's population.

WASHINGTON

Infers BANKERS LIKE New Bill

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

Late Washington dispatches infer that the banking fraternity is not opposed to the proposed Banking Act of 1935. This is news in capital letters.

The House Banking and Currency committee has been given to understand that high officials of the American Bankers Association were consulted while the bill was being drawn. In fact, Rudolph Hecht, president of the association, is said to have helped advise the legal and economic staffs drawing up the bill.

* * *

Quite frankly it is too much for us to understand. There seems to be such a definite trend toward central dictatorship in that one would suppose the Yankees would fight the whole bill. When the Senate committee goes into action perhaps we shall have more light on this situation. Especially if Carter Glass is in his usual form. Then, too, we have a stormy session ahead of us. Drives are adopting the tactics of Rudolph Hecht other days and striving to create a legislative log jam. Lengthy committee hearings featuring little opposition but followed by bitter floor battles would do the trick.

* * *

Notebook: In this notebook we want to make this entry: Radicalism in legislation is waning, and conservative forces are going to tie up Congress so nearly that many of the astounding proposals to regulate American business will die a dusty death in pigeonholes. Those that pass will be so amended that the great majority will come to look on them as needed reforms which will not inconvenience business . . . We have cherished this line of thought secretly for many weeks and the writings of a Washington commentator this week encourage our notations.

* * *

The long awaited opportunity to scan the market features of the week's purchases for a technical rally seems to be here. The 94.96 area has been penetrated and while this list may spend a few sessions in that area it is not too soon to calculate a possible profit opportunities in the event of a genuine technical rally. For the present we will look on the rally limit as some 4 to 6 points. This would be around 100-102.

* * *

Shorts: The Investors' Market Surveys sends along a list of potential rally levels which encourage the idea of fairly profitable swing . . . The New York organization notes American Can between 112-114. Atchison at around 38-39. Johns Manville in the 38-39 area and Union Pacific under 85 . . . Stop orders are counted in all instances . . . The thought all traders should hold uppermost is that current buying is to be based on appreciation of a futuristic point . . . It could come from lower levels as we have previously indicated.

LOCAL Mart Prices IRREGULAR

The tone of the market was steady to firm, with but one or two issues showing important changes.

X-RAY
Examination, consultation and trial treatment absolutely free to all who call before March 31st. The wonderful power of the X-ray and mercury quartz vapor treatment is producing results in cases of chronic disease. No matter what your disease, Dr. Walsh, M. D., fulfills the above offer.

VARICOSE VEINS
Mrs. Graville Jeramette, 278 Marlboro St., Boston, says:—"Fourteen years ago I fell on the stone sidewalk and injured my leg so that it swelled very much and left me with varicose veins. The veins were pulled to keep it bandaged. I met Mrs. Ryan of Winthrop, who happened to be there and advised me to consult Dr. Walsh. She did so and I am glad to say that I am another members of her family for various ailments and she has brought me to solid health me. I had Dr. Walsh treat me and I am pleased to recommend the first I am pleased to make this statement that others who suffer as I did may know where to go for help."
(Signed) Mrs. Graville Jeramette.

NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER

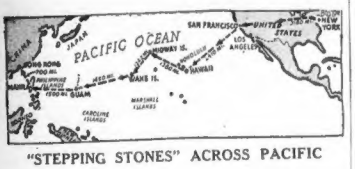
BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

TUESDAY, MARCH 19, 1935

LARGEST EVENING CIRCULATION BY MORE THAN 80,000

No More East and West

Asia and America Will Soon Be Linked in the Air



"STEPPING STONES" ACROSS PACIFIC

NEXT month Pan-American Airways begins the establishment of air transport between the United States and China—the greatest areonautical project ever undertaken.

Bases will be constructed or utilized in Hawaii, Midway Island, Wake Island, Guam and Manila.

It links up East and West, wipes out space, makes possible the transportation of mail and passengers one-third of the distance round the world in less time than you could have crossed this continent a few years ago.

One thought that will occur to many is that these "stepping stones" across the Pacific should be FORTIFIED AND DEFENDED.

They would be useful to us and equally useful to an enemy if the latter got possession of them.

Fortunately, we shall not be bound much longer by the foolish Washington Treaty in which we agreed NOT to fortify any of our possessions beyond Hawaii.

We shall be even more stupid than we were then if we do not keep this new air route COMPLETELY AMERICAN, and keep it American with adequate defenses instead of paper pacts.

Come to Bay State

"John F." Gives Invitation

COME to Massachusetts!

"Our climate in Massachusetts in the Summer is just as delightful and invigorating as is yours at the present time," the ex-mayor told Miami listeners.

"Last Summer when St. Louis and Omaha were burning with the heat, down on Cape Cod the temperature was rarely as high as 80, with a splendid breeze blowing all the time and the water temperature in the 70's.

"Oysters, clams, lobsters, codfish, bluefish, fresh right from the ocean, can be had for every meal."

And he made a very practical suggestion when he urged the railroads should give half rates to tourists from the West.

Textile Protection

Why the Delay?

United States Senator David I. Walsh last Saturday called attention of the Senate to a fact of much New England importance.

It was that he had demanded of Chairman Robert Lincoln O'Brien of the Federal Tariff Commission protection vital to our textile industry.

The points noted by Senator Walsh have more than once been cited editorially by the Boston Evening American.

The other is the mounting cost of cotton goods due to the ill-conceived processing tax.

Senator Walsh is in agreement with us in regarding the matter as very urgent if financial disaster and heavy loss of employment are to be avoided.

High Gasoline Tax

Finds Defenders

The high gasoline tax in Massachusetts has its defenders.

They are the members of the Worcester County Selectmen's Association.

Despite such votes, Massachusetts will progress.

She will move ahead and keep in line with the wishes of her over-burdened taxpayers.

France's Loss, America's Gain

For Once Perhaps

Fashion experts returning from Paris say that youth is to be the keynote of this Spring's styles. They also say that business in Paris is poor because so many American women are buying at home.

Maybe the Spring of 1935 will be the season in which young American women will desert their out-moded allegiance to Paris to become American again both in style of dress and spirit of youth. We hope so. It's about time.

'Get Off My Nest!'

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, March 19—No branch of journalism has stepped out and gone places like book reviewing. Not so long ago there were not a half dozen critics nationally known. Mostly it was done by venerable putterers—the editorial shop's superannuated who performed odd jobs. Book reviews appeared once a week.

O. O. McIntyre

Today the book reviewer has a daily column in one of the most conspicuous pages of the paper. With it goes a thumbnail photograph. He is often in demand on the radio, as a lecturer before women's clubs and literary societies and is three sheeted in big book ads.

Such critics as William Soskin, Harry Hansen, Lewis Gannett and several others are under contract at sizable figures. Many have other legitimate irons in the fire that swell incomes. Socially they are in far greater demand then columnists or other special writers.

It happens at intervals that one dashes off a best seller in the manner of Isabel Paterson last summer. Or some of the Van Dorens. Thus peeved authors cannot, with adverse criticism, sneer: "Why don't you write a better one?" Many have. Also reviewers are their own bosses more than any type of print slaves.

Ford Frick, young sport writer who became a surprise president of the national league, is away to a good start and riding hard. Greyheads who regarded his appointment with a little trepidation have been won over. Given the bit, Frick has shown he knows where to go and his swings about the circuit have done much to pep up baseball. His radio experience made him a forceful speaker, a gift rare in the big league councils.

The Fifth avenue 5 o'clock parade, once a peacock promenade of color and fashion, has completely vanished. Today it's mostly a drab and hackly flow of workers making for buses, elevated and subway.

Now and then one may see Joi D. Rockefeller, Jr., strolling northward to his home in the 50's. But he's about the last straggler of the celebrity roll.

But there was a sartorial nifty on East 57th street this afternoon. A Robert Hilliard looking fellow with silvered hair, a black Homberg, ash gray double-breasted, black breast pocket handkerchief and a black four-in-hand with hot ziggedy, a single inch-wide horizontal bar of cherry red across the loop.

I walked ahead and looked back twice. And if I'm not mistaken Conde Nast sneaked a couple of peeks on passant.

No Beau Brummel of the metropolis, however, has ever topped to my notion, Fred Foster in our town. He came to day clerk in the leadin' hotel, bringing the first gold mesh watch fob, blue stock with pearl pin, white flannel trousers and patent leather oxfords in needle point.

His premature white hair was in a middle-parted natural marcelle and his goose-necked meerschaum was jacketed in chamois. Fred Rathburn, Herman Uhrig, Frank Smith, Wayne Sanns and other bloods took one look and went home via back streets for days.

Incidentally, the McCrory brothers home-spun Missourians in their 60's, operate a gayly bedecked haberdashery in a midtown side-street. Their clientele includes stage folk and writers who drop in as much for the exuberant chatter as for the glossy outfittings.

The other rainy morning trade turned suddenly slack and finally near noon one of the brothers grumbled over muffing a marked-down 39 cent garter sale. "What's 39 cents?" comforted Joe Lewis. "The way trade has been this morning," snapped the haberdasher, "it's a trend!"

Old or new, it's a fair tipsy tale. George Akerson tells of the stew wearing into a lunch room after midnight. "Coffee 'n a doughnut," he mumbled.

The counterman said he was out of doughnuts but could give him coffee. "Gimme tea 'n a doughnut then," he hiccuped. Again it was explained there were no doughnuts. Swaying awhile he said "Gimme milk 'n a doughnut."

This time the irritated counterman shouted "I told you three times we have no doughnuts!" Passing his hand over his face, the drunk beamed: "Sall right. Just gimme a doughnut!"

Beware of Fanatics

By Hendrik Van Loon

The late Maximilian Robespierre was a drab and mousy sort of person who seemed predestined by fate to play a very drab and mousy role in the small provincial town into which he was born.

His father had been a lawyer. His grandfather had been a lawyer.

Young Maximilian therefore was to learn the legal trade and follow in the ancestral footsteps. Eventually he might even marry a little money and do quite well as an advocate of the King's Bench.

He was a tender-hearted person who in his leisure hours wrote poetry for a local literary society called after the most fragrant of our flowers.

For a short period he was a judge, but when he found himself face to face with the necessity of condemning a fellow to the gallows, he hastily resigned. He was much too soft-natured to do such a thing.

OUT FOR REFORM

He returned to his slender legal practice and at night he declaimed his verses before the admiring multitudes of the "Rosati," for such was the name of his literary and musical society.

And once in a while he would even make a political speech, for the country was greatly agitated by the prospect of reform, and it was the duty of all good citizens to devote at least part of their time to the welfare of the community at large.

And so it happened that in the year 1789 this shy and unobtrusive young lawyer, without friends and without money, and without influence of any sort, was elected to represent his native city of Arras in the Estates General, which were to help their beloved king in rehabilitating his sorely afflicted domains.

* * *

There was no more mousy and drab member of that vast congregation of Frenchmen than the young awkward deputy from the north. He said nothing. He did nothing. He lived with Spartan-like simplicity.

Maximilian was so entirely and completely devoted to man that there was no room left in his heart for mere woman. For Maximilian was a fanatic with a hobby. He had fallen a victim to the doctrines of Jean Jacques Rousseau, and he never got over it.

Jean Jacques had taught him that man had been born good and noble, but that his goodness and his nobility had been sadly spoiled by his subsequent contacts with civilization.

* * *

Robespierre was invincible, for he knew what he wanted, and life and death meant nothing to him in view of the greater Purpose that dominated all his thoughts and acts.

He knew but one single tune—virtue and goodness and goodness and virtue—and he piped it until in their final despair his enemies made common cause and destroyed him.

My friends, beware of the fanatic with a hobby, whether he was born a subject to good King Louis or merely hails from a state called after His Majesty's grandfather.

Protects President

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

They say of the tall and gray Ed Starling that he is the finest revolver shot in the country.

He ought to be pretty nearly that, because, like all good children of the feud country of Kentucky, he came into the world with a shotgun in his 10 tiny fingers.

This tall, powerful sharpshooter is the man who takes over the job of being protector of the President of the United States and his family.

Edwin C. Hill

Second in command of the White House secret service squad for almost a score of years, Col. Starling steps into the post just relinquished by the equally famous Dick Jarvis, who requested a transfer to field service. This makes him Franklin Roosevelt's new boss.

But in the matter of his comings and goings, his yacht trips, a visit to the theater, a day at the circus, an afternoon at the baseball park or just a little walk around the block he'll take his orders from Col. Starling.

Of course, he may go as many times as he chooses, but the matter of his actual coming, going and his stay will be something out of his hands.

The Secret Service is directly responsible for the safety of the chief executive and it takes this tremendous responsibility with the gravity that it warrants.

It was my good fortune to be with Warren G. Harding in Ohio and in Florida immediately after his election and also to see him in Washington after his inauguration.

I don't believe he ever got used to his Secret Service guard. They probably were friendly enemies until the tragic end in San Francisco.

Theodore Roosevelt and Woodrow Wilson were two others who chafed at the bit. Roosevelt had the supreme confidence of being able to take care of himself, and Wilson had the intellectual disdain of violence or the thought of it.

Starling taught him to hunt and to fish, thus prompting the memorable summer in the Black Hills, out of which came the more memorable message: "I do not choose to run for President.

Colonel Starling once saved the life of Georges Clemenceau. He was in Paris with the American delegation of the peace conference, and the French were so impressed by American Secret Service methods that they asked for instruction.

Starling was assigned to do the teaching and, in connection with it, was riding in an automobile behind Clemenceau's at a public affair.

His quick eye caught the pistol in the hand of an assailant and he fired from the hip. The bullet reached the murderer's hand just as he fired, with the result that the shot went high and passed through the hat of Frnce's premier.

The colonel's main duty in the past has been that of advance man for the President.

He went on ahead to the city to be visited, selected the railroad, arranged the time schedule, studied the course for the parade, made the hotel arrangements and mapped out the assignments of the police of the city.

'American System' Upheld

By JAMES T. WILLIAMS, JR.

At last the tide appears to be turning in the Federal city — turning from the craven abdication by a cowardly Congress of its constitutional responsibility, turning toward the restoration of the American system of government established by the framers of the federal constitution.

Senator Fletcher

It is the Senate, however, and not the House of Representatives which appears to be chiefly responsible for this swing back toward the constitutional balance of power so long regarded as one of the most essential and effective safeguards of representative government.

ENJOY LONG TERM

This is surprising because in theory, at least, the House is supposed to be closer to the heart of the people than is the Senate.

This welcome turn of the tide, under the leadership of the Senate, is well illustrated by what happened the other day when the Army appropriation bill was before the Senate.

The House of Representatives had voted to increase the actual strength of what is left of the little United States Army from 120,000 to 165,000 enlisted men, but the increase was to be left to the discretion of the President.

This was an extraordinary decision on the part of the House. It was an abdication by the House of one of the greatest powers under the Constitution—control of the purse.

To the Congress—the Senate and House of Representatives—the Constitution gives the duty of providing for the common defense.

CREDIT TO FLETCHER

The Senator Fletcher of Florida is due the credit for as clear and concise a defense of the position taken by the Senate in this vital matter, as has been heard in either House in a long time.

Said Senator Fletcher, speaking for the American system of government established by the Federal Constitution, and speaking as a Senator "who knows no master, and acknowledges no dictators!"

"I think we should not put that kind of responsibility on the President. Congress should say whether we shall increase the Army and not leave it to the President. Let us take a little responsibility ourselves. It belongs to us. It is a matter of legislation."

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

What Do You Want Out of Life?

LIFE DOESN'T OWE YOU ANYTHING.

The world doesn't owe you health or wealth or happiness or even civil consideration.

You came into this world a beggar. With no more actual personal rights than a turnip. And you will go out of it ditto unless you hustle.

Elsie Robinson

You get out of the world exactly what you can take out of it—and nothing more.

MUST MAKE GOOD

"But some people are born rich and influential," you say.

You're wrong. Some people are born with riches and influence adjacent to them.

WE'RE ALL ON OUR OWN.

The game is up to YOU. It is as much up to you as it was up to your great-great-grandpa when he roamed the edge of a Pleistocene swamp and chewed his mammoth raw.

You live in a modern city and he lived in a primeval jungle, but you're both playing a lone game.

And if you think that the other chap is going to mind your business for you, you're plain crazy.

So stop expecting people to help you—

Or understand you—

Or be nice to you—

Or clear the trail for you—

Face the facts that you, alone, are responsible for getting that thing for yourself—

Then go after it!

Will you land?

You will.
